ELECTRIC MINE LAMP. Superintendent Law, of the Newton Coal Company of Pittston, to Give It a Thorough Test.

General Manager John B. Law of the Newton Coal company, has placed an order with the Electric Portable Lamp company of Elmira, N. Y., for twelve of their chloride electric lamps, says the Pittston Item. "The chloride lamp was patented March 5, 1889. It is three and one-half inches in height. The box, or a side piece, is made of a composition resembling rubber and which is wired in the mold before being pressed. Upon opening the box, a partition is found dividing it into two parts or cells, and in each cell there are two upright rods, one of zinc and one of zinc elements, each of which has a hole half way up for that purpose. After the plates are put in position a solution, consisting of one part of sulphuric acid and twenty parts of water, is put in the cells and a rubber cover is laid over it. This is followed by a top of the same material as the box, which is screwed on. The battery is hermetically sealed and the lamp is ready for use. The entire time for putting the lamp in place and otherwise preparing the lamp for service does not require a half minute. "The lamp can be turned on by operating a little switch that is conveniently placed in front of the battery case, just below the reflector. The diameter of the lens is two and one-half inches. The light is most clear and brilliant, and Mine Inspector Stein says 'that he could read a paper at distance of forty feet by the light furnished by the lamp.' "The plates will stand twelve hours service, they becoming exhausted only as the light is used. When the plates are exhausted new ones can be obtained for 10 cents. To enable the lamp to be used in the coldest winter it will be placed on a table. A reflector attached to the box increases the power of the small incandescent lamp some 90 times."

UNIVERSALIST YOUNG PEOPLE. Susquehanna Association in Session at All Souls' Church. Saturday and yesterday was held in All Souls' Universalist church on Pine street the quarterly convention of the Young People's Union of the Susquehanna Universalist association. Saturday's three sessions were of a business nature while those yesterday morning and evening were of a purely devotional order. The union will meet at 7 o'clock in May.

The feature of Saturday morning's session was a paper on younger people's work, read by Mr. Eldridge, of Brooklyn. The afternoon was devoted to routine business and reports of officers and societies. It was determined to begin the publication of an official union paper, and if its success was assured, to continue the publication. A varied entertainment programme of recitations, papers and music was rendered in the evening. Revs. F. W. Whipple, pastor of All Souls' church; Rev. R. E. Horn, of Brooklyn, Pa., and Rev. F. E. Adams, of Foster, the three ministers attending the convention, participated in yesterday's services. Mr. Horn preached in the morning and Mr. Adams in the evening. The one hour's devotional period which preceded the evening service was conducted by Miss Emma Eldridge, of this city. The annual meeting will not be held until next autumn.

He Came From Wilkes-Barre. The police were informed Saturday that an insane man was causing much annoyance at the South Steel mill. Mounted officer Dyer was sent to the place and arrested John Finnegan, of Wilkes-Barre, who was evidently insane. He was sent back to the Asylum City in the evening. SONS OF AMERICA THEORY AND FACT

Dr. Griffin Doesn't Doubt Patriotism But Criticizes Its Application.

THE GERMS OF GOOD GOVERNMENT

They Are Found in the Good Interest of Good Citizens Who Elect Good Men to Office—United States Left As an Inheritance to Present Dwellers—Estate Must Be More Than Enjoyed; It Is a Trust.

In the Elm Park church last night Rev. C. M. Griffin, D. D., delivered an eloquent and patriotic sermon taking for his text "The Father of Our Country and His Sons." His text was the words found in Ecclesiastes viii: "Wisdom is good with an inheritance." During the course of his sermon Dr. Griffin said in part: "In every Chinese home of any dimension there is a room of remembrance, in which the family retire to dwell upon the virtue and renown of their ancestors. We will make this church such a place of remembrance to the sun of our fathers. We will take little time to talk of Washington since Mr. Lincoln suggested to add brightness to the sun of glory to that name is alike impossible. In solemn awe pronounce the name and in its dearest splendor leave it shining on. Like the forefathers of the Athenians of whom Pericles declared, 'they receive a praise which grows not old and is the noblest of sepulchres,' let the commander of the Revolutionary army and first president of the United States be enshrined in the loving hearts of his countrymen. Let the eyes of the nation be turned to honor we would feel his presence and the inspiration of his noble character while we consider our responsibility as Sons of America." Dr. Griffin said: "I would have you fix your eyes upon the greatness of Athens until you become filled with love and heretofore, the nation has been acquired by men who knew their duty and had the courage to do it, freely giving their lives to their country and the fathers offering that which they could present at her feast." So Washington and his associates in danger and devotion gave us this grand patrimony, the American republic. Without effort we came into what those heroes, thought out by ear, carved out by sword, and what we should have inherited. What will we do with it? As heirs of such an estate we need wisdom. According to the text, a legacy is a possibility of up and down. It calls for sense to use it.

OUR NATIONAL HERITAGE. Fathers have left shakels to sons and no sense. Such incompetents soon scatter by prodigality or carelessness their property and leave their children penniless. Big assets have been left in our hands—this nation! Have we capacity to keep, use and improve them? We have a hundred years of the government of Pennsylvania had been shaped by Penn reading an account of the system said: "It is perfect, if it can endure, and will preserve our national heritage." That we are sons of fathers does not run in one stock always. It is not blood gets very much reduced in some of the boasting remnants. We can not find a trace of the capacity of their progenitors. We are not yet not really in the lineage. Descendants are often so far descended that they might suspect the connect in never expected. If the children could read wisdom with his wealth there would not be so many estates wasted. So before the holiday we will halt to lay a leaf upon the brow of those who began this experiment of democracy and then see our duty as sons to carry this country to its largest success.

Having the inheritance there are several ways in which we may lose it. First, indifference. We must feel we have some thing to inherit. We know property abandoned by the heirs as not worth looking after. If as some say, the government over us is not imperious, it is not a great benefit, we will neglect the inheritance. Grant said: "We believed then (in the war) and we believe now that we have a right to govern and to fight for it and if need be dying for it." The prize paid for all blood shed in acquiring or in maintaining it. Our share is to preserve and protect the Union with free speech, free schools and free press to the end of time. The estate is not simply to be enjoyed. Our duty is to preserve and protect it. Our share is to preserve and protect the Union with free speech, free schools and free press to the end of time. The estate is not simply to be enjoyed. Our duty is to preserve and protect it. Our share is to preserve and protect the Union with free speech, free schools and free press to the end of time.

INDIFFERENCE OF MAN. Observing the indifference of so many Sons of America I would despair only I know that there was much languidness and hesitancy in the colonies in the days of the struggle for independence. Not every one then on this soil was alive and active for the welfare of the forming state. There was the same unwillingness to suffer; the same willingness which the humorist boasted, to let the wife's relatives enlist, suffer and die; the same greed for promotion, the same jealousy and pettiness and selfishness over which we lament. We simply resent on a large scale what we have the self protectors who watch their doorway and do not care what infests the nation. Every body stands a little beyond their fences. The interest in the late campaign shows that agitation will arouse the mind and hearts of the voters. Every body stands a little beyond their fences. Freedom's battle once begun. Beneath from bleeding sire to son, Though hatred of the evils they endure, And be prepared to share in the conflict.
