THE SCRANTON TRIBUNE-FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 5, 1897.

Here Are the Places That Can Be Distributed.

Something About the Patronage at the Bestowal of President McKinley.

From the Washington Star.

When President McKinley assumes charge of the executive departments of the government and begins to take account of stock in the form of fat fed-eral offices in order to distribute them among loyal followers, he will soon discover that in order to make them go around the miracle of the loaves and be covered by the average politician, who is ambitious for political reward but the great mass of them are not special desirable to one who wants a salary that will provide more than a mere living. Of these places 4.815 are appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, and those are the best offices within the gift of Mr. McKinley. But appointments are made for a term of four years and very few of them with an ambition to serve their country in some pleasant position with a fat salary attached, thereto will find Mr. Mc-Kinley in a position that, will cause them to have a fellow feeling with the poor doggie when it sought Mother Hubbard and her cupboard.

President McKinley will probably re fresh the memory of his callers by showing them how the see-sawing of Republican and Democratic adminis trations has resulted in a constant enlargement of the classified service each administration, protecting thousands of good men politically in sympathy with the president by pulling the civil sercoverlet over them after they had been tucked away in nice berths. He will be able to console them by showing them that thousands of good Republicans, as well as less worthy Democrats, from their point of view have been taken in permanently out of the storm by these methods, and perhaps persuade them that civil servic reform has its benefits after all.

President McKinley might remind the ambitious ones that the civil ser vice act was approved January 16. 1883, providing for the classification for Assitant commissioner land office, 2,000 purposes of open competitive examination of certain places in the departmental service, and in custom house and postoffices having as many as fifty employes, and giving the president authority to extend from time to time it will not be unless there is a wonder ful change of public sentiment. But there are some places left, and, as a rule, they are the best ones the presidents have ever had within their gift.

GOOD FLACES.

consuls have to submit to such an ordeal, but not by the civil service commission. Following is a complete list of United States ambassadors and minsters abroad, with the states from which they are appointed, date of original commission and salary. These appointed carried a salary not more than $2,500 nor less than $1,000. This examination is held by a board of three per-sons designated by the secretary of state. There are in the United States consular service thirty-seven consulates general, 187 consulates, twelve commercial agencies, thirteen consulates where incumbents are permitted to engage in other business and fiftyseven consulates and twenty-three commercial agencies in which insumbents are paid by fees alone. Those receiving official fees are allowed to retain the same up to $2,500 per annum, the surplus being turned into the treasury, Consuls who receive fixed salaries retain only notarial fees. Some of the choice places in the consular service follow. The name of incumbent, state from which appointed, date of appointment, amount of salary, including notarial fees for year ended June 30, 1896, are given:

POSTOFFICES.

There are 158 postmasters of the first class, 701 second class and 2,776 of the third class, the salarles being-first class, over $3,000 per year: second class, between $2,000 and $3,000; third class, between $1,000 and $2,000. The 66,725 postmasters of the fourth class have a compensation less than $1,000.

Of the presidential postoffices, about 250 will be at the disposal of Mr. Me-Kinley during his first month in office. There are forty cases of presidential postmasters' commissions already expired, not acted on by the postoffice deportment, and thirty-eight more will expire during March.

There are 129 nominations of presidential postmasters upon which the senate has so far taken no action, and probably 100 of these will be returned to the postoffice department without senatorial action, and thus left to Mc-Kinley men. The remaining ones-

HOW THE CHANGES HAVE BEEN pointments are for four years: " MADE.

Under President Arthur there was a growth of 1.649 classified places, which, added to the number originally classified, made the total over 15,000 at the April 8, 1893; $10,000. close of his administration. President Cleveland added more than 7,000 by ex-ecutive order during his first adminis-tration, and the increase by natural county by the increase by natural fornia, April 24, 1893; $12,000. close of his administration. President growth during the same time was about 4,500 places. In 1893 President Harrison included in the classified 29, 1885; $12,000. postal service all free delivery postof-By this extension there were added to the kinssified service 557 postoffices, with a total of 7,600 employes, April 4, 1893; $10,000 There was a natural growth of nearly 7,000 places during Mr. Harrison's administration. So it was that at the beginning of the present administration $5.000 there were approximately 43,000 places included within the classified service, and so energetically has President Cleveland promoted civil service reform that he nearly doubled the number of Germany-Edwin F. And this is the way he did it: He extended the classified service May 11, 1894, to assistant teachers in the Indian service, and May 28 meat inspectors in the bureau of animal industry were so included, On November 2, 1894, messengers and watchmen in the departments at Washington were included, as well as employes in custom houses having as many as twenty employes, and at the same time the entire customs classification was exended so as to bring within it all employes, except mere laborers, without regard to compensation, and a large number in the postal service was added to the competitive list. November 17 steamboat clerks and transfer clerks in the railway mail service were brought under the rules, and December 12 the classification was extended over the internal revenue. The superintendents of postoffice stations at which carriers are employed were put in the classified class January 3, 1895, and March 4 of the same year the classification was extended to the census divison of the interior department, and the 24th of the following May all places in the department, of agriculture not previously classified were so included.
