ner, Edward Coons, Ford Pratt, M. Louis Blair, Charles Sweet and Willis Sweet. Class No. 18 of the Plymouth Congregational church, taught by Richard Owens, was pleasantly entertained last evening at the home of Abel Stover, on Lafayette street, a member of the class. Games, music and other diversions of a social nature were enjoyed until a seasonable hour, when delicious refreshments were served. The members of the class present, including Mr. Owens, were: Lou Davis, Everett Davis, William Robertson, John Herdman, Otis Meyers, Charles Cadogan, George Reese, William Reese, Horatio Price, David Lewis, William Greene, Robert Williams, Gus Eynon, Charles Dougherty, Bert James, John Thomas, Thomas Davis, Abel Stover and Thomas Skerritt.

What was termed a bachelors' party was held last evening at the residence of Rev. J. B. Sweet, 222 North Hyde Park avenue. Those present were: Alfred Twining, Will Hagen, Frank Hager, Harry Acker, J. P. Acker, Charles Acker, Dr. E. J. Harrison, Jenkin Reese, Tom Behnam, George Peck, Charles Lull, Evan Jones, Will Whitman, Harry Randolph, George Peck, Harry Wrigley, Will Wrigley, Professor William Jones, Otis Altman, Roy Colverson, Richard Castner and John Thro. The social was arranged by Mr. Twining with the idea of inaugurating a series of like affairs the purpose of which is to bring into closer relationship in a social way the young men of the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church with their pastor, Mr. Sweet. A dozen of years ago there existed a similar movement and several of the members at that time were present last evening. Mr. Twining spoke of this in his interesting talk. He told of the bachelors and their ways at that time and expressed the hope that the future would still more closely knit the affections of pastor and young men. During the evening an entertainment was rendered. Mr. Behnam sang "The Holy City" in a manner even more remarkable effective than any previous effort. A quartette, Mr. Behnam, Harry Acker, Harry Wrigley and Professor Jones, sang "Annal Laurie." Professor Jones, also, rendered a pleasing solo. The recitation of little Reba Sweet, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Sweet, was very cleverly done. Chas. Sweet played a hand solo. Attorney George Peck favored with a recitation. Walter Davies, the church organist, was accompanist of the evening. Refreshments were served by the ladies present. It was a most enjoyable social and reflected approval to the idea of Mr. Twining.

The Epworth League of the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church held a "string" social last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. F. York, on Price street. The "string" part of it was that the guests, Mr. and Mrs. York, of them—sat in circles and tied together small pieces of string. The last one tied got a prize. It was something after that fashion, anyhow. Frank Chase, Robert Williams and Miss Lizzie Mills were the presiding ladies of victory. Refreshments were served.

The Sunday school class taught by Miss Mattie Nichols at the Washburn Street Presbyterian church Sunday school, held a home party last evening, at the home of Miss Lottie Ace, of South Lincoln avenue.

At a meeting of the Sumner Avenue church last night, Mr. Foster was chosen the first ballot. The Taylor church had previously selected him. Rev. J. P. Moffat, moderator of the district, presided last evening. The vote showed that there were nearly a half hundred persons present. Rev. OBITUARY.

The death occurred on Tuesday at Yatesville of William J. Moffat, one of the oldest and best known residents of that community. The immediate cause of his death was paralysis of the heart. Mr. Moffat was born in Oswego county, New York, sixty-three years and ten months ago, and twenty-five years of his period were spent in Yatesville. He was a soldier in the late war, he being a member of Company B, Fifty-eighth regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and saw active service. His wife and only child, T. B. Moffat, the Pittston merchant, survive. The funeral was held yesterday.

Samuel Netherton, Sr., of Second street, Jersey, an old and highly respected citizen of the borough, died yesterday morning after a long and lingering illness of miners' asthma. The deceased was born in Cornwall, England, and came to this country in 1855 and has been a resident of Jersey ever since. He is survived by a widow and five sons, namely, William and Joseph A. Fort, Samuel, Thomas and Charles J. Jersey, and John A. Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with services in the Methodist church.

William Maier died at his home, in North Towanda, Wednesday morning, after a week's illness of typhoid pneumonia, aged about 60 years. He was a native of about a year ago and by the death of the father five little children are left completely orphaned.

Dr. Joseph F. Gallagher, a well-known Freehold physician, died Wednesday, aged 71 years. He is survived by his mother and two sisters—Mrs. John Keenan, of Lockley, and Mrs. Ellen McDonald, of Freehold—and a brother, J. M. Mooney, of Wilkes-Barre, a half brother.

Benjamin Horton died at his home, in Horn Brook, Tuesday afternoon, aged 69 years. He is survived by a wife and three children—Myrtle, Ida and Walter.

TRYING TO BE FUNNY.

An Alleged Interview in the Times That Needs Amendment. "I want to sell my farm now," said Farmer Knight, of Clark's Summit, this morning as he strolled in the "Times" office. "As Cleveland is president no longer after noon and I do not like the incoming administration," Mr. Knight then placed at the disposal of the editor, stating that his farm was for sale. He is a Democrat and always stood by the old guard, and the Hanna-stamped policy is more than a century old on the farm and is now coming to live in the city. He declares that the Republican financial policy is of the ruinous order and will depopulate the country sections unless some change occurs.

The foregoing is taken from last evening's Times. All of it is true except what is false. Mr. Knight has a farm for sale, as his advertisement elsewhere attests, but he said he knew he couldn't sell it while Cleveland was in office. The remainder of the Times' article is without a syllable of truth.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

[Under this heading short letters of interest will be published when accompanied by full publication by the writer's name. The Tribune will not be held responsible for opinions here expressed.]

Mr. Leach's Opinion. Editor of the Tribune. I saw in Monday's Tribune a statement made by H. E. Faine to the effect that the late Legislature had got the Turnpike and Plankroad condemned by court. I do not think there are many who desire it, certainly they will not, after a careful examination of the matter. Taking Mr. Faine's statement that he has expended $1,425 on less than two miles of road his comparison of the cost of his road to what was expended on the Turnpike and Plankroad is a very poor one. The road in South Abington, and the public verdict is that the township roads are to be better than ever. Mr. Faine is considering the miserable accommodation which has been received for that outlay and the amount of toll taken. I think the authorities of the city and South Abington ought to take the matter in hand and give the traveling public much better accommodations for less than a free road into the city. It is a shame that the public has to submit to such a condition of things. I think, by all means give us a free road. N. Leach.

SOUTH SIDE.

Yesterday afternoon, what might have resulted in a runaway, was averted by a heroic effort on the part of Edward McGuigan, foreman of the Tribune press room, who was driving a horse-drawn wagon on the street. The horse was taking an afternoon drive in a sulky drawn by his spirited horse and when he reached Birch street, where the street cars turn from Cedar street, the horse became unmanageable and the driver, who was partially paralyzed from the constant exertion of controlling the steed, and unable to check the horse, stepped out of the carriage and ran to the curb. The horse, however, did not stop and continued on its way. The driver, however, did not stop and continued on its way.

The Chicago lawyer, who was called to a small town in the Pennsylvania oil region, which acted as the Pennsylvania oil lawyer, became greatly interested in a prisoner whom he found there in jail awaiting trial for murder. The fellow was a tramp and apparently had not a friend in the oil district or anywhere else on earth. The case against him, however, was based entirely on circumstantial evidence, and the Chicago man believed that it would be an easy matter to establish the prisoner's innocence and secure his acquittal. Having had several talks with the tramp, who told a plain, straightforward, convincing story, the lawyer undertook to conduct his defense solely in the interest of justice.

The prosecution made out a complete chain of incriminating circumstances. It was shown that late in the evening a pistol shot had been heard, and pedestrians who hastened to investigate found a resident of the town lying in the street dead, with a bullet hole in his head. It looked like an attempted robbery, which met with resistance and resulted in murder. Lying beside the body was an old, battered derby hat.

The alarm was given and a search was organized, which resulted in the arrest of the tramp, who was found in an alley not far away, and was bareheaded. The hat found by the murdered man's body fitted the suspects head nicely. But the tramp had no revolver.

The prosecution claimed that the prisoner had thrown his revolver into a neighboring river after committing the murder, and the whole case hinged upon the identification of the hat. The tramp explained his bareheaded condition by saying that he had lost his hat during the night while sleeping on a freight train.

The Chicago lawyer denied the identification of the hat. He pointed out the fact that although it fitted the prisoner it would also fit the prosecuting attorney and the presiding judge himself.

The jury retired, and in a few minutes brought in a verdict of acquittal. The prisoner seemed to take the result quite stoically. He thanked the Chicago man, added his profound conviction that the latter was "a bird," and turning to the court remarked: "Judge, may I have my hat now, if you are through with it?"

DYNAMITE FIENDS AT WORK.

An Attempt is Made to Blow Up a House at Mt. Carmel. Mount Carmel, Pa., March 4.—A nearly successful attempt was made last night to blow Andrew Serkin and his family into eternity by exploding dynamite beneath his house. Some persons, at present unknown, exploded the charge of dynamite under the house, which was directly under his sleeping rooms. One end of the house was blown into splinters, and Serkin and his family were hurled from their beds by the shock, but, except a few bruises received by his children in their fall, the family escaped unharmed.

Four men were seen running away from the house after the explosion and were chased, but escaped. Serkin knows of no enemies that he has or any reasons for the attempt upon the lives of himself and family.

LUZERNE'S CRIMES OF A YEAR.

There Were Nineteen Indictments for Murder During 1896.

One thing Luzerne county can exceed us in is lawlessness. During the year 1896, according to the published summary of the work of District Attorney Fell's office there were 1,975 cases brought to the attention of the grand jury and 881 true bills found.

There were nineteen indictments and thirteen true bills found. The largest aggregate of any crime was that of assault and battery, of which there were 45 bills, with, however, only 46 indictments.

Altogether there were 69 different varieties of crime almost exhausting the category. AN OPEN LETTER FROM DR. SWALLOW

Editor of the Pennsylvania Methodist Addresses the Governor.

A FEW L. L. SUIT SUGGESTIONS

He Names the Allegations Upon Which Action May Be Brought. Important Points Not Touched in the Charges Against the Defendant. The Act of 1895 Criticized.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 3.—The following open letter has been addressed to Governor H. Swallow by Dr. S. C. Swallow, now under bonds for court trial for criminal libel:

My dear Sir:—I am about to submit to you a proposition which, if I should succeed in my distinguished career (perhaps), I am certain they would be content to its submission to you, from reason of a professional character, but I am compelled to the presentation of it, by a firm, the highest motives, such as, as you approve.

In your statement, given to the public on the 21st of February, you say: "The arrest of Dr. Swallow for libel is the only method by which the truth or falsity of the allegations which he had made in his paper can be ascertained." "And again, "an angry interest in the matter having been manifested, I am compelled to the presentation of it, by a firm, the highest motives, such as, as you approve."

Now, the true story, while I am not in harmony with your statement that a libel suit specially sprung and vigorously pressed against the man claiming to have evidence of wrong doing, is the most efficient way of getting at the whole truth, but on the other hand will, by legal technicalities, prevent such a conclusion, yet still prevent such a conclusion, interested in the matter of having statements verified or proven false, and since I seek not my own vindication as much as the highest and best ends of justice, the protection of the people of a great Commonwealth, indeed, the highest honor made me propose of service, as follows for the present to defer to your judgment, as to method.

Now, inasmuch as we are to appear before a tribunal of the highest honor, one in whose ability and integrity the people of the state have the most implicit confidence, and inasmuch as the representatives of the state in their suits for libel brought against me, have not touched the important points in the allegations contained in the editorial of the Pennsylvania Methodist of Feb. 25, My I respectfully suggest that what we both seek, as expressed in your statement, can be more speedily attained, and the trouble and expense of a second trial averted, if you, or those who represent you, or are near to you, will sue on the following allegations, and let all be tried at once.

THE ALLEGATIONS.

That persons have been paid money out of the state treasury who rendered no service to the state, and in some cases made no pretense of service except as politicians serving their party.

That for services rendered the state, persons have been asked to sign receipts for two, three and even four times as much money as they actually received.

That in the purchase of material and labor, for making additions, alterations, repairs and refurnishing the capital buildings and cellars and grounds, also for the executive mansion and now for Grace church, the state has been grossly defrauded of dollars as the result of an unfair system of competitive bidding. In other words, that the cost to the state has been twice, four and at high times five in some instances as much as it should have been and that not all of this money went to the persons furnishing the materials and labor and further that at least some of the board of public grounds and buildings custodians have guilty knowledge in this excessive cost.

That the act of 1895, by which the governor, auditor general and state treasurer constitute the board of commissioners of public grounds and buildings, having control of repairs, alterations and improvements, and expenses incurred, including furnishing and refurnishing is corrupting in its tendencies, pernicious in its results and has already cost the state at least $100,000 more than the same improvements, etc., should have cost under some other system of management.

With considerations of the highest possible respect, I beg to remain, Your servant for the truth, S. C. Swallow.

Virginia's Governor.

Charleston, W. Va., March 4.—G. W. Atkinson, who is acting as governor of West Virginia at noon today and the Democrat party retired from the state administration for the first time in twenty-five years.
