COMMON PLEAS COURT.

Number of Cases Continued and Settled-Those That Were Called Up for Trial.

Judge Archbald in court room No. 1 nd Judge Gunster in No. 2 started in esterday to dispose of 105 civil cases n three weeks, the time allotted for the March term of common pleas. Fifteen of these cases were gotten out of the way by continuance and settlement. Those settled were: Catherine De Lacy against the city of Scranton, damages

The only case disposed of by trial vas that of John Huntsman against George F. Barber for wages, in which the jury awarded for the plaintiff in the full amount of the claim $45.41. Two cases were on at adjournment. Michael Fennell is prosecuting Tony Magnotta for wages and Thomas Reese is suing the Delaware, Lackavanna and Western company and Thomas Carson for $10,000 damages for the death of his boy.

This latter case grows out of an acsident at Storr's shaft No. 2. On May 1, 1894, David Reese, the fifteencear-old son of the plaintiff, was killed by a mine car. The plaintiff alleges that the lad's death was due to double negligence on the part of the company, first in giving the boy a notoriously vicious mule and secondly by complying with the mine law at least ten feet space shall be maintained for a passageway between the rall and the rib. According to the plaintiff's version the boy was trying to start the mule when it balked and turned almost completely around,

Another boy from the other side of the road waved his cap at the mule, and with a sudden jump it started up and young Reese was forced against the rib at a point where the passageway was only four inches wide, and sourced to death between the side of the car and the projecting rib.

Among the witnesses called were Thomas McGuire, Peter Smith and Arthur Evans, by whom it was proposed to show that "Burr." the mule in the case, was notoriously victous. Their testimony, however, was disappointing to the plaintiffs, and some badinage between the attorneys led to rather pointed insinuations about tampering with witnesses and playing to the jury on intimations when evidence was lacking. Messrs, Wedemard and Burns represented the plaintiff and Warren & Knapp and M. J. Corbett the defense.

HIS STORIES DID NOT AGREE.

So John Hamoid Was Sent to the County Jail.

John Hamold, of Taylor, either talked too much or else he knows what he is talking about, for he was arraigned before Alderman Howe yesterday afternoon charged with burgiarlzing the store of John S. Weible of Taylor, on December 4, 1896.

Hamold went to Weible and pretended to know something about the rob bery. He said that he knew where the stolen goods were and when the con stable began to search different part of Taylor Hamold intimated that the goods were near the city line, But the booty was not found. Humbole then made the offer that if the dis trict attorney would free him personally from the robbery he would furnish information against the guilty

When, however, he was taken before the grand jury Humbold denied that he had ever said anything about the case to Welble or any one else. His arrest followed yesterday and he was brought in the afternoon before Alderman Howe. William Price and Grocer Weible, both of Taylor, swore to what Humbold had told them about the robbery and the hiding place of the stolen goods. Humbold pleaded not guilty but was sent to jail to
