A FATAL FIGHT.

Two Susquehanna county young men few weeks since returned from a leer-hunting trip through Pike county. ringing with them a pair of locked horns, which they obtained from an old hunter in that section. The hunter, in prowling through the woods, came upon the carcasses of two fine bucks, their horns firmly interlocked. They evidently had been fighting, and in the struggle had locked horns. Being unable to get separated, and, conequently, smalle to obtain any food, they had starved to death in that post tion. One set had nine prongs. The horns are so firmly locked together that it is impossible to separate them without sawing off one of the prongs.
