The ranchman then pushed a blank check into the pot and said something that sounded like this:

"'Ump thra a gug-u luck i a!' "The king looked at him closely for a moment and then laid down his four aces and left the table and this broke up the game. I was atsounded at his action, and finding his majesty in an ante-room trying to drown out the memory of his losses, I asked:

"'Your majesty, what made you lay down those four aces?"

"'Didn't you hear what that man said?" he'sorrowfully inquired.

" 'No,' said I. 'What did he say?' "'Why, when he pushed that blank check into the pot he said, 'I'll raisa you eleven million dollars!""

"In the excitement of the play the ranchman had gotten his numbers mixed and had almost prostrated the king with the size of the bet."

An English Lawyer Who Had His Wits Under His Command.

The ready wit of the late Mr. Butt, Q. C., M. P., more than once stood him in good stead. He himself often told two stories relating to widely divergent circumstances, but bearing on the same point. Going home late one night, he was accosted by a desperate-looking ruffian in one of the suburbs of Dublin, and asked what he was going to stand.

"Well," replied Mr. Butt mekely, "I'm very sorry that I can't give you much my friends, but what I have we will share. Here," he continued, drawing s revolver from his pocket, "is a weapor which has six chambers. I will give you three, and-" But here the lawyer found bimself alone.

The other story relates to a bit of clever bar practice on his part, looked at solely from the point of the French advocate who gave the best advice he could to his client in advising his escape from jail. England to defend a man charged with sedition, Mr. Butt, to the horror of his solicitor, challenged the name of a man on the jury hest known to be favorably disposed to the prisoner. "Mr. Butt, sir, what are you doing "" expostulated the minor man of The great advocate simply raised his little finger and the solicitor sat down in stupefied amazement.

Mr. Butt having challenged, the crown advocate upheld the name, and the man was empaneled. But for this ruse the crown lawyers had intended to strike the man off, as Mr. Butt very well knew. The jury could not agree and the prisoner escaped.
