KEAFOR BALLOT

An Effort Will Be Made to Amend the Baker Ballot Law.

FEATURES OF THE NEW MEASURE

Will Provide for a Fair and Full Opportunity to Every Elector to Express His Choice -- An Important Bill Placed on the Calendar .- An Off Week in Legislative Circles.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 25.—The Keat-or ballot reform bill will be taken up by the house next Thursday for second reading. It was reached last week and postponed by Mr. Keator, owing to the absence of many members. The measure embodies the amendments to the Baker act recommended by the Pennsylvania ballot reform association. It introduces the Australian system and changes the present disability clause. Names of candidates with political appellation are arranged under the title of office, extors, which are grouped. The candidate's name may appear on the ballot only once, thus doing away with the cumbersome confusing and misleading custom of placing the name of the caudidate in several places. This will reduce the ballot to about onesixth the present size. After the names appear all the political titles of the candidates. Blank spaces are left for written names, and these require no cross mark to be made after every other name voted for. Under the proposed law a voter who claims disability to mark his ballot must swear to his disability. The one who assists must also make oath not to attempt to influence the vote or disclose the voter's ballot, except in judicial proceedings. This is a great simplification of the system of voting. Mr. Keator has had printed for illustration a sample ballot as it will appear if the bill becomes a law. A number of other ballot measures are pending but none has reached the stage of the Clinton Rogers Woodruff, the municipal reform leader in the house, is cooperating with Mr. Keator in urging the passage of his measure.

"The amendments will not interfere with any of the good features of the Baker law of 1893," Mr. Woodruff said, "but will provide for a fair and full opportunity for every elector to express The bill is just and equitable both to the voter and to the can-The present law is unjust in that it discriminates against a class of voters in favor of another. Like the civil service bill, it seems that, except for some politicians whose business may be interfered with, all classes are interested in having the measure become a law."

ADVOCATED BY THE BAR.

The legislation advocated by the Pennsylvania Bar Association at its annual meeting last summer at Bedford is still on the calendar. The Simpson bill regulating the practice in the superior court has passed the house and has been brought out of the senate judicial general committee and read the first time. Its object is to make identical the practice in the higher appellate courts.

Another bill is that creating a commission to review and keep within constitutional limits all bills introduced in the legislature. This measure was defeated a month ago on second reading and later put back on the calendar.

This will be an off week in legislative The senate has taken a receas until Wednesday evening and the Louise until Wednesday afternoon to allow the members to attend the unveiling of the Grant monument next Tuesday in New York.

Bills limiting the expense of candidates and political meetings; making eight hours a legal day's work for mechanics, workingmen and laborers in the employ of state and municipa! corporations and on public works, are among those on the house calendar for second reading, but will not be reached this week.

There are several important senate bills in the house awaiting third reading and final passage. One authorizes the appointment of a warden and matron of prisons in counties of a population of 150,000 or over.
