> The first Women's Whist congress, held at the Hotel Walton, Philadelphia, this week, was a remarkable success. The game is 150 years old, but never in its history has any event happened which approaches this in importance and significance. The congress opened on Tuesday with a business meeting followed by a compass match for women's pairs, in which one hundred and twelve pairs participated. Tuesday evening a mixed pair game was played by one hundred and nine pairs. Both matches had to be divided into three sections, and on Friday the winning pairs in each sec-

Preliminary arrangements were made to send representatives to the Women's Whist ongress at Philadelphia, but owing to illness and other reasons it was impossible to send a good pair and it was wisely deemed best to give up the idea. It is unfortunate that Scranton could not be represented as th congress was a great success in every way. A hand recently played at Detroit by one bad play. The leader has a seven card establishtd suit, a singleton ace and ace and three small trumps. He leads a small trump taken by fourth hand, gets in with the singleton ace and leads ace of trumps and follows with small, finding major tinace with opponent. In this case seven tricks were lost in an endeavor to save one. The situation is not uncommon and should always be handled conservatively. In a local game a few weeks ago, six tricks were lost by a similar play. This was considered a record breaker but is cast in the shade by the

The following by Work in the Evening Telegraph is valuable, as the situation is not uncommon: "We have been asked what a third hand player should do under the following circumstances: 'He holds six trumps headed by Ace, King, Queen, and two plain suits, one consisting of four cards of the Ace, ten, and five.

The partner leads the Queen of the third plain suit, in which the third hand has nothing. The question is, should the third hand make a "one card call" by discarding the ten of his three-card suit? A correspondent urges that he should not signal, as the leader may not have a re-entry, and can therefore not get in again to give the third hand the discards he needs.

"We cannot view the case in this light. We think the signal should be made, but that the leader should not shift his suit to trump unless he has re-entry. Under such circumstances he should refuse to obey the signal if he knows he cannot again get the lead. "Such a hand was recently played in this city. The leader answered the signal, thereby saying, "I have a reentry." The third hand, after leading enough trumps to get a discard, found the re-entry was in his four-card suit. He at once opened that with the Queen. This forced the Ace, and the remaining suit was opened. The original third hand played his Ace second hand and made the rest of the tricks." J. W. DUSENBURY.

The Bishop Told That He Could't time and refreshments. Learn to Swear So.

A well known bishop, who takes prominent interest in everything affecting the working classes, wishing to judge for himself what a journey in a workman's carriage was like, took a short game of compass whist will be ticket and joined the miscellaneous crowd which fills these trains on the Great Eastern railroad.

After a most undignified struggle for seat, he found himself jammed in between a navvy, smoking a strong black pipe, on his right, and an artist in house painting, smelling strongly of his craft and carefully balancing a can of green paint, on his left hand. The good bishop, apprehensive for the safe balance of this can and nauseated by the very unpleasant odors arising, was also very much shocked by the bad language which garnished the conversation of his neighbors. After a particularly strong expression from the navvy, the bishop, touching him gently, inquired: "My good man, please tell me where you learn the language you have just made use of?" The navvy replied, with a suspicion of pride in his tone: "Learn it, gouv-nor? You can't learn it! It's a gift!"

"Having taken Paine's celery comound for the last few weeks, I have found it a perfect spring remedy, and en much benefited by it."

Spring is the decisive time in the ife of every person out of health. It is an assured fact that stubborn disorders become quickly curable in the spring. This is especially true of such persistent troubles as rheumatism, neualgia and obstinate kidney diseases. No one, sick or well, can afford to "try" uncertain remedies in spring, or any other time. The dishonesty of many self-named spring remedies becomes startlingly apparent when their results are compared with the results obtained from this accurate, scientific preparation, Paine's celery compound.
