LIVELY DEBATE ON PITTSBURG CHARTER

Senator Quay and Chairman Garman Favor the Measure.

OPPOSED BY FLINN AND MAGEE

Mr. Stewart, of Philadelphia, Also Protests on Grounds That People of the Quaker City Do Not Want to Pittsburg.

Harrisburg, May 6.-There was a full house this morning in anticipation of a bitter fight over the Pittsburg charter bill. The measure makes Pittsburg a city of the first class and authorizes the governor to appoint a mayor and other city officials within ten days after its goes into effect. State Chairman Garman is here trying to line up the Democrats for it. Senator Quay and friends favor the bill and have made a careful canvass of the house. Senators Flinn and Mages and their followers are opposed to it. Mr. Tilbrook, of Allegheny, called up

Mr. Coray, of Luzerne, said it was a strange thing that not a representative from Pittsburg favored this position, if the people of that city were clamoring for it. He was in favor of home rule for the city of Pittsburg and was therefore opposed to the bill. The bill passed second reading by a vote of 100

WHERE INTEREST LAGS.

The afternoon session was devoid of bills on second reading and a large years old, and is in a critical condinumber passed this stage.

When the senate bill requiring political caucusses and conventions to be held in the district in which the delegates are chosen came up for second reading, Mr. Seyfert, of Lancaster, moved to amend so that the act should not apply to countles in which nominations are made by a direct vote or by the Crawford and Clarion county systems. The question was raised that if the amendment was inserted it would make the act unconstitutional. After Mr. Seyfert had explained the system of nominating Republican candidates in Lancaster county and the effect the measure would have on the party organization if it was adopted in its original shape, a motion was adopted to postpone for the present. The senate civil service bill was called up by Mr. Lytle, of Huntingdon, and postponed for the present. The bill in its present form applies only to Philadelphia, Allegheny, Schuylkill and Luzerne counties.

The Rodgers charter bill, which makes Pittsburg a first-class city, was passed on second reading during the afternoon and was allowed to go over by its friends. Considerable time was given up to the reading of senate bill to revise and amend the act of May 23, 1889, enlarging and defining the powers of cities of the third class. The measure was framed by the convention of representatives of this class of cities held last summer at Williamsport. The house adjourned at 5.40 o'clock until tomorrow morning,

FOR THE WHISTERS.

The women's congress closed las Saturday with great enthusiasm among the members. The attendance was large each day. Nearly three hundred women whisters were present and it is conceded that the whist playing shown in the open games was of a better quality than at the "Manhattan Beach" congress. The officers elected were as follows: President, Mrs. T. H. Andrews, of Philadelphia; vice president, Mrs. Joseph R. Hawley, of Washington; second vice president, Mrs. Clar-ence W. Brown, of Toledo; treasurer, Mrs. Silas W. Pettit, of Philadelphia; secretary, Miss Florence C. Green, of Providence, and a board of seventeen directors from various cities. The important team-of-four match for the Washington trophy was won by the Trist Whist club, of Philadelphia, by one-half a match. The champion four being Mrs. Frank Samuel, Mrs. Rodman Wister, Mrs. Eugene Ellison and Mrs. H. Toulmin. The women's pair contest was won by Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Brandt, of Boston, The mixed pair contest was won by Miss Goldsorough and Mr. McCoy, of Baltimore by three tricks, the match score being tle with Mrs. Toulmin and Mr. Work, of Philadelphia. It was intended to play a match on Friday between the women and men, but the attendance was so large that the preparations proved inadequate, and it was found to be impossible to arrange a satisfactory match, so the immense gathering had to resort to impromptu progressive games in small sections. At this first Women's Whist congress, which was at first regarded as a doubtful experi-ment, delegates were present from the following cities: Milwaukee, Washington, Denver, Brooklyn, Providence, Decatur, Boston, Princeton, Chicago, Allegheny, Wilmington, New York, Haittmore, San Francisco, Newark, Potts-ville, Minneapolis, Philadelphia and De-

"Duplicate Whist and Modern Leads," by John T. Mitchell, of Chicago, is the latest addition to whist literature. Unlike some of its immediate predecessors, it is an addition indeed. Every one familiar with the history of the game knows who Mr. Mitchell is and what he has done for whist, In devising methods for match play and comparison he stands without a rival. In his present work he gives the result of his labor in this field in a compact and wonderfully clear form.

Scene-Rooms of the Toledo Whist club, ladies' night.

Two ladies playing together as a pair a a compass contest against the gentiemen. One lady, who prides herself on being read up on all the latest "wrinkles," leads the ten of spades. The king of hearts is turned to her right. She holds ace, queen, and three other trumps. Her partner takes the trick with the ace, returning a small spade, which original leader trumps, incidentally heaving a deep sigh. 'So you are leading sneaks," softly marked one of her opponents. "No, indeed, I am not. That was an pregular lead; I wanted my pariner to lead trumps through that honor turned, That's the new play."

Getting the lead soon after, her partner led trumps through the turned honor. The "new play" worked atl right.-Toledo Blade.

The Hamiltonian opened the Jack of trumps, in spite of the "demonstraions" of the short suiters which are alleged to prove that trump should never be opened without a strong plain suit, and regardless of the views of those who say the trump should not influence the size of the trump led. Hamilton gained three tricks on this deal. J. W. Dusenbury,
