THE PROBERS WILL VISIT MATTEAWAN

Legislative Committee to Inspect the Famous New York Asylum.

JUDGE GORDON REFUSES TO GO

He Was Invited with Two Friends to Accompany the Committee, but Could Not Accept the Invitation.

Philadelphia, May 28.—The legislative committee investigating the state peni-tentiaries resumed its labors yesterday at the Eastern penitentiary. After ad-journment the committee decided to visit the Matteawan asylum in New York, and extended an invitation to Judge Gordon and two of his friends and three officials of the penitentiary to accompany them. The party will leave Broad street station on a special car attached to the 3.50 p. m. train for New York this afternoon and return on Saturday evening.

The invitation was telegraphed to Judge Gordon, at Spring Lake, N. J., but he last evening sent the following reply to Chairman Seyfert: "I sincerely regret that I cannot now see my way to going with your committee to the New York asylum. I greatly appreciate your kind invitation, however, and would eagerly accept if it were possi-

The proceedings yesterday were devold of any sensational or exciting features, the nearest approach thereto being the somewhat caustic criticism by General Wistar of the action of Judge Gordon in his procedure to have several insare prisoners removed from the penitentiary and his severe strictures upon the inspectors before the investigating committee. Assistant District Attor-ney Barlow also came under the genernl's notice during the course of his tes-

DR. BACON ON THE STAND.

The first and principal witness of the day was Dr. John Bacon, a former prison physician, who resigned in February last. After stating his tenure of office as prison physician and his duties as such Dr. Bacon was asked by Representative Coryell, who conducted the examination, if any insane prisoners had been sent to the penitentiary dar-ing his incumbency. He replied that such had been received, one from Philadelphia and one from West Chezter. Asked if there were others who were insane during his term he repiled; 'James Jacobs, of Lancaster county, was reported insane when he came Lere, I believe. I remember no oth-

Questioned as to his experience in picking out the insane, he said it was exceedingly difficult, and when famous alienists erred it could hardly be expected that those who do not make a specialty of mental diseases would never make a mistake. The doctor then explained the methods pursued when prisoners are brought to the institution. A careful record is made of their condition and any pecul-farities they may be possessed of. The books containing those records, he said, were taken to Judge Gordon in court but were completely ignored. The records would have shown the condition of all of those men when re-

The man of many neckties is not necessarily an extravagant man. There's a good many kinds of neckties. There's the 50c, tie that looks like a 25c. tie. # VICTORIA'S REIGN.

From the Chicago Record.

On May 24 Victoria Alexandrina, queen of Great Britain and Ireland and empress of India, passed the seventy-eighth anniversary of her birth, and on June 22 will celebrate the sixtleth anniversary of her coronation, making the longest reign in English history for more than a thousand years, or from the time of Egliert, A. D. 828. This historic record was made Sept. 22 last, when Queen Victoria's reign passed that of King George 111., who did not complete the sixtleth year of his reign by eight months, and this unique fact in English history would have been celebrated last autumn but for the queen's expressed wish that the cele-bration for which all London is now preparing might be delayed until the coming June, the anniversary of her coronation. The fiftieth anniversary was celebrated ten years ago as a jubilee, and hence the celebration of next month will be called the diamond jubilee, and will probably exceed in enthusiastic and impressive celebration any similar event in European

Not only has Queen Victoria achieved the singular felicity of an unprecedent-edly long reign in English history, but her reign has been an especially glorious one, marked by unexampled pro-gress in almost every direction for the people over whom she has held a beneficent sway. Mere statistics are confus-ing and often misleading, but when it is remembered that the population of the united kingdom has nearly doubled dur-ing Victoria's reign, and that now as queen and empress she rules over more than 10,000,000 square miles of territory, comprising an empire on which the sun ormous physical advance made under her reign is set forth. It is also estimated that, whereas the extent of the present empire is five times as great as it was when the young queen, a girl of 18, as-cended the throne, the aggregate prop-erty of her subjects has trebled during the same period, and the advance in for-eign trade for the same time has been more than 450 per cent.

Even to indicate advance in other lines during the queen's reign is not a slight task, considering the varied peoples and climes over which the authority of England has been extended during the last sixty years and the multitudinous directions of modern activity, genius and re-search. The greatest soldier England has known—Arthur, duke of Wellington, carried the sword of state before the queen at her coronation, and England at that time held a very high place, indeed, among the nations. But today, in times of peace, the forces available for imperial defense amount to more than a million soldiers, scattered in different quarters of the globe, and a grand total of 505 warships of all kinds, with 94,060 officers, seamen, and marines, making a fleet nearly as large as that of France and Paysis combined.

Perhaps to the queen herself the most noticeable change that has occured in her reign is in the great metropolis and capital in which, at Kensington palace, on the morning on June 20, 1837, the Prin-cess Alexandrina Victoria heard at the same time the news that William IV was lying dead in Windsor castle and that was summoned to the throne. that time London was a city of a little over 1,000,000 inhabitants, and during the sixty years of the queen's reign it has quadrupled its population, while in oth-er respects the change has been equally er respects the change has been equally great. There is almost as much difference between the London of today and the London of that date as between London then and the London of 300 years ago. London in Queen Elizabeth's time had a population of perhaps 700,000, contained from 10,000 to 12,000 streets, alleys and lanes and 156,000 houses. Even in the first quarter of the present century, when Queen Victoria was but a little girl, the great city had but 60,000 buildings. These had increased in 1873 to 528,734 inhabited houses, and at present the world's metropolis is inpresent the world's metropolis is in creasing its population at the rate of 45,000 a year, and adds yearly 1,000 streets and 10,000 houses. Marshy fields and green commons over which the Princess Vic-toria watched ployer and mallard fly are now covered by stately mansions, squares and palaces, and still London continues its irresistible advance.

These changes, however, speak of growth and advancement, and do not have the pathos that attaches to changes in friends and the increasing ioneliness which is the dower of the years. Of the twelve bridesmalds who attended Queen Victoria on her marriage, Feb. 10, 1840.

Ording Albert of Save Course only to Prince Albert, of Saxe-Coburg, only three now survive, while of the peers and personages who attended her coronation only four remain to attend the exercise of the diamond jubilee-Earl Nelson, at that time a 13-year-old peer; the earl of Leicester, who acted as page of honor to the duke of Sussex: Mr. Gladstone, now 88, and Mr. Villiers, "the father of the house," who at the age of 35 still takes part in the deliberations of parliament. Ministers of state, the archbishop who crowned her, the "fron duke" and all the twelve ladies of high degree who bore the young princess' train on that occasion, have passed away, while Vic-toria remains, and may yet by reigning five years longer rival the reign of Leo-pold 1 of Hapsburg, or twelve years hence may even surpass the record of Louis XIV and achieve the distinction of reigning longer than any monarch of Europe.

Crazed by Smoking Cigarettes. Worcester, Mass., May 28.—Charles W. Pope, 28, of Oxford, was committed to the Worcester Lunatic hospital today. Experts who have examined him have de-clared that his trouble is due to excessive smoking of cigarettes.
