PROCEEDINGS ARE QUASHED.

Action of Court with Reference to the Abington Turnpike Matter. Argument was heard by the three judges yesterday on the rule to quash the proceedings instituted with a view to making the Providence, Abington and Turnpike and Plank road free from tolls and toll gates. Similar proceedings were begun seven years ago but were never pushed to a termination. When the present proceedings were begun they were opposed by the attorneys of the Turnpike company on the ground that the previous proceedings had never been determined.

For that reason the court yesterday decided to quash the proceedings then under consideration and an order to that effect was made.

DESCRIPTION OF THE DEPARTMENT STORE

A Building That Scranton Can Point to with Pride.

OVER 100,000 FEET OF FLOOR SPACE

Plate Glass Framed in Iron and Trimmed with Stone Is a Trite Way of Describing the Structure—Four Stories in Height and Handsome and Modern in Every Particular. Will Be Finished and Occupied Before the Holidays.

In the department store building which the Handley executors are to erect on the site of the Wyoming house, Scranton is to have an architectural addition, which will be as beautiful and modern as the structure which at present blights this most desirable plot in ugly and out-of-date. Architect L. C. Holden, of New York, who was engaged to make the plans following the suggestions of the Handley executors and Jonas Long's sons, who are to occupy the store, has designed a building that the city will be proud of. It is to cover the entire block now occupied by the Wyoming house, and its four stories and basement will therefore give over 100,000 square feet of floor space.

The main dimensions are as follows: Interior area, 142x134 1/2; height from basement floor to top of dome, 93 feet; height to coping, 70 feet; height of basement, 12 feet; first story, 18 feet 6 inches; second story, 14 feet; third story, 12 feet; fourth story, 12 feet; dome above ceiling of fourth floor, 20 feet.

The frame work of the building is to be of the best structural iron; faced with Forest City stone and Indiana limestone trimmings. The ornamentation will be in stone and copper, stone predominating. Georgia pine and poplar will be the material of the interior finishing.

PLENTY OF LIGHT. Light without stint was undoubtedly the idea uppermost in the architect's mind. The facings of the building have all the plate glass that they can carry, and raising from the center of the roof is a glass dome 30 feet in diameter, surrounding a square well 32x28 feet, descending to the first floor. Then in addition to this there is a partition in the entire building, each floor having a clear area of 20,000 square feet broken only by the 42 iron columns, which form the supports and binders of the different floors. It is virtually a plate glass box braced with iron.

The Lackawanna avenue front and Wyoming avenue front are counterparts of each other, except in this that on the Wyoming avenue side the frontage is five and a half feet greater. The building comes out to the fence line on Lackawanna avenue and to the line of the adjacent buildings on Wyoming avenue. It is rectangular leaving out one of which a small quadrangular space is taken for an area that will preclude the shutting out of light from the side windows on the forward part of the Burgess block.

In general appearance the building will be handsome without being extremely ornamental. The two main entrances, which are from the center of each frontage, will be twenty feet wide in the clear and will be highly ornamented with a small quadrangular space will be carried to the top of the building and at the roof an ornamental projection of 14x20 feet will break what would otherwise be straight eave lines. A fancy balustrade surmounted by fifty feet will ornament the coping. Electric lights will be placed on top of these poles.

LARGE DISPLAY WINDOWS.

On the ground floor built up from a foot and a half base there will be a series of plate glass windows broken only by the two principal entrances and the narrow window frames. These windows will be twelve in number. On the upper floors there will be three bay windows flanking each side of the central twenty-foot window which enter into the ornamental effect of the area immediately above the entrances. Despite all this plate glass the general effect of the exterior is very substantial, so cleverly has the architect done his work.

Of the interior of the building little is to be said until the fixtures are put in. The main feature is a grand staircase at the end of the building opposite the Lackawanna avenue entrance. It extends to every floor and on the first floor connects with a balcony over the main entrance. There is a smaller staircase in the southeast corner, a double passenger elevator opposite the Wyoming avenue entrance and half way between the center of the building and the eastern wall, and a freight elevator in the northeast corner. The walls are to be finished in white plaster.

The building, it is estimated, will cost $1,000,000 and will be finished and occupied before the holidays if present plans do not fail.

LAST OF PARLOA SERIES OF TALKS

Speaker Took Table Service as the Subject of Her Discourse.

SHE GAVE SOME HELPFUL HINTS

Told Her Hearers That Table Manners Are a Good Indication of the Refinement of a Family—Gave a Number of Directions Concerning the Manner of Arranging a Table. Miss Parloa Will Go to Vermont to Write a Book.

The last lecture in the course of twelve conducted by Miss Maria Parloa at the Young Men's Christian Association hall under the direction of the Young Women's Christian association was delivered yesterday afternoon to the largest audience of any.

The subject was "Table Service" which, as will appear evident, is a most important factor in the home "machinery," as Miss Parloa expressively has put it. To say that the lecture proved entertaining would only say what can be said of every one of Miss Parloa's discourses, only the subject yesterday treated of a higher, probably the highest attainment of a good housekeeper. In her introductory remarks Miss Parloa said:

In proper table service depends much of the comfort, cheerfulness and refinement of a family. No amount of lavishness and perfection in the preparation of food will compensate for poor arrangements and service in the dining-room. Here must be the greatest order and yet the greatest freedom. Table manners and service are a good gauge of the refinement of a family and of a people.

CERTAIN DEFINITE RULES. There are certain definite rules which should be followed in all households, from the very simplest to the most sumptuous. It is the duty of every person to do his or her part to make the time, passed at the table, the most pleasant and profitable. The weary, haste, lack of conversation, and often the ill temper shown at table, has much to do with the national diseases known as dyspepsia.

After thus denoting the value of good table service the lecturer proceeded to lay down some rules for the guidance of the ladies present. After showing the necessity of placing thick cloth under the tablecloth, Miss Parloa in turn discussed at length the following points:

- 1. The tablecloth must be put on the table perfectly flat and even. 2. Place the center ornament. 3. Put plates in place having them the proper distance apart. 4. Put silver in two—knives and spoons at the right, forks at the left. 5. Napkins, if fresh, in plate; or at side, if in use, at right side. 6. Tumblers at right, near point of knife. 7. Condiments, individual or grouped. 8. All food placed in proper position on the table. 9. Water places, soup, meats, water, from the right side. 10. Carved meats, like meat, fish, etc., are carried in the hand; small dishes on tray. 11. All dishes held so low that guest serves himself with ease. 12. Waiter stands at left of carver or other service important. 13. The simpler the more elegant and less liability to blunders. 14. Great changes in manner of service when one has guests: a great lot or mixture of guests; naturally, much depends upon the quality of the water. The softer and purer it is the better. This concluded the last lecture. Miss Parloa has proved an entertaining instructor. She has in every lecture given undoubted proof of her familiarity with the subject at hand and this has awakened an all-important confidence in her ability by the ladies who from day to day have attended the meetings.

Miss Parloa can well enjoy the pleasure of knowing that her work in Scranton has proved not only beneficial in a practical sense but also won for her personal friends who are numbered only by her acquaintances. It is interesting to know that Miss Parloa leaves today for Vermont, where she will complete a book on "Domestic Economy," which she is writing.

THIS IS CIRCUS DAY.

Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Combined Shows Exhibit Here Today. Forepaugh's and Sells Brothers' combined circuses will exhibit in this city this afternoon and evening on the grounds abutting on Providence road, where Barnum's show was seen one year ago. It may be somewhat later than usual when the tents, animals, etc., arrive today, for the show exhibited at Allentown yesterday and the Jump is a long one, and moreover slow time will necessarily be made in coming down through the mountains between Allentown and Wilkes-Barre. Every effort will be made to have the parade in the center of the city at 10 o'clock and it will be one well worth seeing. The magnitude and completeness of the circus may be inferred from the fact that it presents twelve really eminent bareback riders, namely: The Orford, Frank Melville, the Hobsons, Donna Adele, William Walllett, Lizzie Rowland, Eugene Foots, A. M. Davenport, Bernard Orton and Mollie Davenport. These celebrities appear at every performance in a brilliant program of principal, double, carrying, juggling, hurdle and jockey acts. The other attractions of the combined shows are legion.

ST. CECILIA ACADEMY RECITAL.

Music Class Reflects Much Credit Upon the Precursors. As varied a programme of music as one would want to hear and as excellent as the most exacting could demand from children, was rendered last night at St. Thomas College hall by the music class of St. Cecilia's academy.

Ninety-five pupils participated. The renditions consisted of chorus singing, orchestral selections, piano solos, duets, trios, quartets and sextets, violin, harp, mandolin and guitar numbers and vocal selections. The orchestral numbers were especially pleasing and the singing of Miss Katherine Foot particularly worthy of mention. Master Robert Reeves' band solo was also a taking number, the audience evincing much surprise and delight at the ability of the diminutive performer.

The recital reflected much credit upon the children's teachers, the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart.
