family of Daniel Morgan, a well known resident of Terrace street, were greatly alarmed on Thursday by his disappearance. He has been an infor several months, but left his home for a short walk in the morning. As the hours passed and he did not return much alarm was felt. Late in the evening a party of seventeen started for the mountain, but their search was Another party started in a different direction along the gravity track, and so on to Salem mountain. But early in the morning the welcome news was received that John Dockerty, a miner, had seen him in the neighborhood of the Powderly mine. Daniel M. Davis and Gomer Morgan, taking a horse and carriage, hastened to the locality, and, at 5 o'clock found him near the mine on a pile of culm. He seemed to be in a dazed condition, but was persuaded to return home. He evidently wandered upon Salem mountain and was greatly exhausted. He is still in a very excited state, and a constant watch is kept over him.

Until four months ago Mr. Morgan most efficient workman, emplayed by the Delaware and Hudson company; since that time he has been under the physician's care. It is hoped that he derangement is only temporary.

Trantwin-Colville Reception. Mesdames A. B. Trautwein and W. Colville received their lady friends

last night at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Trautwein at a 6 o'clock tea. Nearly one hundred invitations were issued. The residence was beautifully decorated with offwers of every variety. The table decorations con-sisted of carnations, forget-me-nots, pansies and many rare flowers. Music was furnished by the Mandolin and Gultar club. During the evening refreshments were served by the following young ladies: Misses Belle Vannan Jennie Butler, Gertrude Raynor, Jessie Watt, Mary Yarrington and Lucy Westlake.

-XE WAT Receive Their Wages.

The carpenters employed by Con-tractor Kinback are anxious to receive their wages. All the accounts due Mr. Kinback for work or materials furnished have been transferred and assigned and are to be paid to W. S. Rice, James Carey and Israel P. Rogers. It is thought that this arrangement protects the workmen. The carpenters will finish their work and collect balances for their salaries. Several houses are hearly finished and when completed payment will be made. It is thought that the carpenters will receive full payment.

JERMYN,

The coal trade is reported quiet with a better demand for coal by dealers from New England points than around New York. This demand sprung up some weeks ago and was largely induced by the chance for cheap freights which presented itself, and the idea that prices would go no lower. The boats used at that time are now returning and will be sent back full. Most of the coal is going into dealers' hands to provide the usual stock, but dealers do not seem to be in a hurry to stock up. The question of an advance June 1st brings out different views. Some think the advance will be made, while others are pretty certain no change will be made until July 1. It is the usual time for an advance, but as the custom of issuing a spring circular was not observed this to have little bearing.
