PERSONAL.

Charles Broome has returned from a visit at Carbondale. Miss Nellie DeGraw, of Peckville, is visiting West Side friends. Mrs. John T. Swift has returned to her home in Archbald after spending a few days with relatives in this city. Opinions of members of the bar with reference to the manner in which District Attorney John R. Jones has conducted the opening of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum for the early season. Manager J. F. Cummings, of the Olympan Opera House, is home from a trip to Philadelphia, where he succeeded in making a number of first class attractions for the early season. Mrs. M. D. Roche, of Capouse avenue, attending the Grand Army of the Republic state convention at Johnstown, one of the department officers of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic. Captain W. A. May, president of the board of trade, and Secretary D. B. Atherton, of that organization, leave for Philadelphia this morning to attend the formal opening of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum. The ceremonies incident to the opening will consume today and tomorrow concluding with a banquet tomorrow night, in the grand ballroom and many other distinguished men have promised to attend. The Scrantonienses will return home Thursday noon and until that time the board of trade rooms will be closed.

SATURDAY IS FIELD DAY.

Pupils of the Public Schools Will Have an Outing. Next Saturday will be the annual "field day" of the children of the public schools of Scranton. The Teachers' association of the schools have for the past month been arranging the affair and arrangements for it are now almost perfected. Lake Ariel is the place and the tickets are 25 cents for children and 75 cents for adults. The general committee in charge is composed of Professor J. B. Hawker, H. L. Burdick and J. E. Malley. Every male principal of the Scranton schools is on some committee or another. Professor D. A. Stone, principal at No. 33 school, is superintendent of games. A soliciting committee has secured from leading merchants of the city a large number of prizes for the games. These will be awarded to the winners of the various events.

HANDSOME MEMORIAL VOLUME.

Presented to Stevens Post of Peckville by John R. Jones. District Attorney John R. Jones presented Lieutenant James G. Stevens Post, No. 304, Grand Army of the Republic, of Peckville, with a handsome Memorial volume Saturday evening, which cost $100. The exercises were conducted in the Methodist Episcopal church, and Mr. Jones made a patriotic speech in presenting the volume. Halsey Lathrop made the speech of acceptance on the part of the post.

PUPILS OF THE TRAINING SCHOOL.

They Give an Interesting Demonstration in the High School.

ADDRESS BY PROFESSOR HOWELL.

He Said the Teacher Who Counts in Educational Work is the One with Individuality--The One Who Does Not Possess It is a School-keeper and Not a School Teacher. Addresses by President Jennings and Controllers Gibbons and Wormser.

Misses Mary Carpenter, Mary Daniels, Jane V. Bell, Ella Frable, Clara Gibbs, May Adelle Graves, Louise B. Leader, Isabel Powell, Catherine L. Quinnan and Rose I. Shields, members of this year's graduating class at the Scranton Training school for teachers, gave a public exhibition of the work in the school room yesterday afternoon at the high school. The exercises were intended as a preliminary to the commencement night entertainment, and as an opportunity for the public to see the methods used in the training of prospective teachers.

As there are no final examinations possible according to the conduct of the training school, Superintendent of Schools George Howell and T. J. Jennings, John Frisco, F. T. Wormser, R. A. Francis, P. J. Langner and George Carson, members of the school board, were present in a semi-official way to criticize, favorably or otherwise, the work that has been done by Miss Mary E. Sykes, instructress at the school. The criticism was all complimentary to both teachers and pupils, and Superintendent Howell heartily and effectively expressed his pleasure with the work of the day.

WORK WAS PRACTICAL.

The room was comfortably seated with friends of the class. The work had been nicely arranged by Miss Sykes. It consisted of practical teaching of classes of pupils from Miss Sykes's room in the high school. These pupils were little girls and boys, whose ages vary from 6 and 12 years, chosen promiscuously and with no thought of their peculiar intellectual fitness for public parades. One of the children was a little colored girl, two were Italians. It showed forcibly the cosmopolitan character of the school. The pupils were divided into classes of six or seven, and each member of the graduating class was allotted 15 minutes of time for teaching on given subjects of reading, language and numbers.

A noticeable feature of the work was the confidence and complacency of the embryo teachers. Susceptibility to nervousness, public appearances seems to have been wholly overcome. At times during the exercises the teachers sang the ditties that are sung in the real school room. After the exercises, which concluded at 3:45 o'clock, Miss Sykes requested Superintendent Howell to address the class. The response was one of the finest short addresses that the eloquent superintendent has made. He first conducted a short severe drill of the teachers. The answers came unhesitatingly and correct. In giving his direct address to the graduates Superintendent Howell said:

PROFESSOR HOWELL'S ADDRESS.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said he would cross the ocean to talk with one great man (meaning Carlyle) rather than see a number of the philosophers of art in Europe. What does the mean, does the Sage of Concord place personally above intellectual achievements, above knowledge of the cause, the study of the world, the golden leaf in the calendar of life, written upon its margin, "personality, far more than his learning shall determine my value as a teacher." The teachers' work lies more in what he is than in what he knows. You may have the philosophy of the oak, the oak, a Mann, a Parker, a Payne or a Harris, unless you have a personality which will impress itself upon your pupils, you fail in the work of education. You are not a school keeper, not a school teacher.

Personality is not sufficiently recognized as an educational factor. Human beings are constantly exerting an unconscious influence upon one another, insensibly moulding character, conduct and destiny. In chemistry there is a process called catalysis, a process by which one substance changes others yet remains unchanged itself. For instance, starch in the presence of an acid is converted into sugar while the acid is unaffected. Silver and gold can decompose the binoxide of hydrogen without any effect being produced upon themselves. This power of catalysis, however, is not confined to the inorganic world. It is a common process in the organic world. We see it constantly in the process of fermentation and in the secretion of blood itself. In fact a careful examination of the cause of growth and decay, life and death, will reveal the fact that they are all produced by this powerful yet unseen catalytic power. Again, let us continue the analogy. What makes the tree grow green like the houghs and branches of the tree, the grass green like the moors, the skates sawny like the sandy bottom of the sea, the polar bear white like the snow clad fields of the frozen North, the Arab brown like the parched sand of the desert?

HAWTHORNE'S ANSWER.

Hawthorne has given you the logical answer and has beautifully pictured the effect of the action of presence in the story, "The Great Stone Face." There is but one conclusion. We become like unto that upon which we look. The mind, too, is tinged with all colors that touch the retina. There is an unsuspected yet intimate relationship between our habits of looking and our habits of thinking. Let your presence then in the school room be sunshine, your heartfelt interest good cheer, your actions, conduct, principles, and all the environments of the school room be such as to etch and beautify the soul of the child. And are we responsible for this unconscious influence, this secret force of virtue within us that goes out to heal or destroy? Yes, we cannot repudiate our responsibility, for character is the sum total of all our thoughts, feelings and actions. Life is a structure made up of what we have thought, said, done and experienced. True, character when made is beyond our control; its latent influence we cannot direct or impede, but we are responsible for its formation. Our accountability to the child, the parent and the state, to God shall be determined by our ability to build and mould character.

Doctor Schaeffer, in his Boston address in '94, said: "The time has come to emphasize the importance of the living teacher, to magnify the Socrates behind the desk rather than his method or the material which he utilizes in feeding the mind of his pupil." Methods and devices are requisite. The technical knowledge of the normal and training school are essential, but we must not pin our faith to the learning of these things. We must adapt, not adopt. We really know only what experience has wrought into our being. Truth that has been merely learned, says Schopenhauer, is like an artificial limb, a false tooth, a waxen nose. It adheres to us only because it has been put on. We are strong when we follow our own talent, weak Practices Before the Lackawanna Courts Despite Disbarment.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE CORNELIUS SMITH.

JUDGE GUNSTER CALLED HIM DOWN.

He Presented a Motion on the Part of Jennings to Have a Case Continued and Although the Court Refused to Recognize His Act, the Case is Nevertheless Continued--Other Days of the First Day of the May Term of Common Pleas.

The three weeks' term of civil court began yesterday with Judge Gunster and Edwards presiding. Among the 105 cases on the list is the latest Jennings-Lehigh-Valley, et al. case, commonly referred to as the omnibus case, because it includes among the defendants everybody that figured in any way in the previous case. It stands at the head of the second week's list, where it was placed.

Another Jennings case, one of the originals from which all the others grew, was set down for tomorrow, but through the graciousness of Judge Gunster was continued until September. At last argument court a hearing was had on a motion of Major Everett Warren, of counsel for the Lehigh Valley company, to compel Jennings and company to engage new counsel, his attorney of record, Cornelius Smith, having been disbarred from the Lackawanna courts. Court granted the motion and Jennings was notified to hire new counsel.

Yesterday morning while Judge Gunster was busy at his desk in chambers, Cornelius Smith walked in, laid a paper before the judge and retired, not saying a word nor waiting to be spoken to. When Judge Gunster came upon the bench after the noon recess he announced that Cornelius Smith had the "indiscretion" to enter his office alone and lay before him a motion for a continuance of the Jennings-Lehigh-Valley case. As Mr. Smith was no longer a member of the Lackawanna bar, he said the judges would not have any dealings with him as an attorney, but that Jennings might not be made to suffer by the action taken before.

JENNINGS SENT FOR.

Jennings and Major Warren were both sent for and arrived in a short time. Jennings came in accompanied by Smith, and the latter stood near his client's elbow or paced up and down the bar enclosure while Jennings was being interrogated. In answer to Judge Gunster's question Jennings said he was acquainted with the contents of the paper which Smith had presented and as the petition set forth he was desirous of having a continuance. He said he had no means to employ counsel now, but thought he would be able to do so in September. Major Warren said he would not object to the continuance as he did not wish to place any hardship on Jennings.

OTHERS CONTINUED.

Other cases continued were: Joseph Mosteller against John Griffin and others, wages; W. A. McDowell against William P. Joyce, interpleader; W. A. Smith against G. A. Fuller, appeal; Michael Moran against the city of Carbondale, damages; Daniel E. Gray against F. Ferris and others, ejectment; Michael Jordan and others against John Regan and others, ejectment; A. B. Herringmaney, executor, against heirs, debt; William Gilroy against Central Railroad of New Jersey, damages; Isaac E. LaBar against the Greenwood Coal company, debt. Only one case got to trial. It was that of S. J. Hinds against the Bonta Plate Glass company. Hinds was employed at Moosic works and sued for $239 balance of wages. The claim is not denied but the defense avers that J. W. Bonta and the company is responsible for the wages, as the company did not take the plant off Bonta's hands until after it shut down. Bonta went on the stand for the defense and admitted that their contention was true, that the agreement between him and the company was that he should erect the plant and prove its efficiency and then the company was to buy it from him. The tests only had been completed when the shut down occurred.

BOARD OF ENGINEERS.

Reorganized Last Night in the Office of Chief Hickey. The board of engineers of the fire department reorganized last night in the office of Chief F. J. Hickey in the city hall. The board consists of Chief Hickey and District Chiefs J. B. Birtley, Fred Warnke, James B. O'Malley, Charles Raynor, M. McManus and Louis Schwass. Fred Durr, chairman of the fire department committee of select council, and Lorenz Zedler, chairman of the fire department committee of common council. The board reorganized by selecting Chief Hickey, president; Lorenz Zedler, treasurer; and Charles Tauxer, secretary. A number of bills were passed upon but no other business of any importance was transacted. Two agents for a patent fire extinguisher appeared before the board and obtained permission to give a demonstration of what their extinguishers can do at the Chemical Engine house Wednesday night. The district engineers subscribed to the oath of office before Mayor Bailey yesterday afternoon.
