PERMANENT HOME FOR THE MISSION

Was Spoken of by Evangelist Crittenton at Last Night's Union Meeting.

PLANS FOR RAISING THE FUNDS

Memberships Will Be Sold for Certain Specified Sums—Elm Park Church Was Crowded Last Night to Hear the Famous Evangelist—He Dwelt Almost Entirely on the Work of the Missions and the Necessity for Their Existence.

Evangelist Charles N. Crittenton last evening addressed a union meeting of the several central city Protestant churches at the Elm Park church on the subject which is inseparably associated with his name—the Florence Crittenton mission. The auditorium and Sunday school annex were crowded to more than the seating capacity. Chairs and the reserve benches were utilized to accommodate the throng. Mr. Crittenton's address was a most remarkable one. The subject of the "long neglected class" is appealing in itself and those who heard the evangelist last night in his mission address last night in an hour knew at once the reason of his devotion to the unique cause. He is an enthusiast in the best sense of the word.

One incident of last night's service which is particularly noteworthy was the remarks of Rev. Joseph K. Dixon, D. D., pastor of the Penn avenue Baptist church.

DR. DIXON'S REMARKS. Mr. Crittenton had concluded his spirited appeal for favor to the fallen spirits of the land when Dr. Dixon was introduced by Rev. C. M. Gilpin, D. D., pastor of the Elm Park church. Dr. Dixon stated in his opening remarks that he had heard only a part of the evangelist's address, but he had heard enough to have his soul profoundly stirred. The subject was a monumental one, said Dr. Dixon. He had been told recently that there is more sin of the character which the evening's subject points in Scranton than there is in New York, Chicago, or San Francisco; that is, comparatively speaking. If that be true then the words of the speaker are doubly important.

Dr. Dixon spoke in this strain for a few minutes, saying that he wished he had the millions that are stored in our banks and in the possession of our wealthy men. He would "put a million in a Florence Mission home by the sea."

The service opened with an organ voluntary played by Professor A. Pennington. Dr. Gilpin read scripture and Rev. Charles Robinson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, who occupied a seat in the pulpit, offered a prayer. Alfred Wooler, of the Elm Park church quartet, sang a gospel hymn selection and then followed the announcement by Dr. Gilpin of the concluding meetings of the series, tonight and Tuesday night at the armory and Wednesday night a farewell meeting in Elm Park church. Dr. Gilpin before placing the meeting in the charge of Mr. Crittenton, extended the courtesies of Elm Park church to the several congregations present. "Not because that we have larger hearts," said Dr. Gilpin, "but because our house is a little larger."

A SILENT PRAYER. Frank Wallace, the Crittenton soloist, sang "Nide, Come," in a very effective manner. Mr. Crittenton before beginning his address led in a few moments of silent prayer. He chose for his theme the strikingly appropriate words in Isaiah, xlii:22, "But this is a people robbed and spoiled; they are all of them snared in holes, and they are hid in prison houses; they are for a prey and none delivereth; for a spoil and none saith: Restore!"

"It covers all classes," said the evangelist. The question is often asked why are they called the "Florence Crittenton" homes. Mr. Crittenton then told the story of his salvation—how the death of his little daughter Florence had instilled within him the desire to see her once more and then the thought that he was unworthy to enter the kingdom; how he decided to become a Christian follower and how he listened to the words of God: "Be obedient." He told of the months immediately following the child's death and how finally the hand pointed to him his life work.

Mr. Crittenton gave incidents and illustrative stories of the life he had seen in the poorer quarters of New York city. He thought: "Why don't these girls enter better avenues?" Then it flashed across his mind that they had none. The Florence Crittenton mission, established by him in New York fourteen years ago was the result.

CAUSES OF RUINED HOMES. Going through these personal reminiscences Mr. Crittenton said that the causes of wrecked and ruined lives are found in "idleness, dancing, skatting, drugs and wages." The final cause he dwelt upon at length, telling a story of how a young widow who received $2.50 per week pay. When she asked for more wages was directed to the bookkeeper of the establishment—a woman—who suggested the life of shame. The young widow afterward became a member of the mission.

Mr. Crittenton followed this introductory with a number of thrilling stories of rescue work. He talked in a quick, all absorbing way and held the closest attention throughout. He cited three places in the Bible where the fallen woman is suggested and divinely forgiven. These are: St. John, fourth chapter; St. John, eighth chapter; St. Luke, seventh chapter.

After Mr. Crittenton's address an effort was made to raise funds for the Scranton mission. Four hundred dollars were subscribed by as many persons, Mr. Crittenton himself being one; besides the general collection. The church was prettily decorated. Owing to the union service the usual evening service was abandoned in a number of the central city churches.

It is not generally known that the management of the Scranton mission will make an effort to obtain enough subscribers for the erection of their own building. This was announced in connection with the meeting last night. Shares for life membership, double membership and single membership will be distributed. For each share the contribution is respectively: $100, $50 and $12.50. The money collected during the Crittenton meetings will serve as a nucleus.

AFTERNOON MEETING. Mr. Crittenton addressed a meeting in the North End at 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon in Company H armory. There was a large attendance. A choir under the leadership of Reese Watkins, organized for the occasion, opened the meeting with a short song service and
