beautiful health resort in which he lives. One of his latest movements is the formation of the "North Wales Summer Holidays Association," the object of which seems to be to facilitate and encourage the flow of visitors to Barmouth.

NEW BOOKS AND MAGAZINES. Conan Doyle has done nothing better in fiction than "Uncle Bernac" published by the Appleton and Co. (New York).

The celebrated Hengwrt collection of MSS. include some peculiar chronicles, among them being the following:—"Part of the History of St. Mark, the Vision of St. Paul, the Story of Judas Iscariot, the Story of Adam, Y. Gress, Names and Wonders of this Island, Fragments of Palmyra, Astronomy, Astrology, the Red Shield of British Arms, a Dialogue between Hell, Satan, Christ, the Saints, David, Easias, Adam, Death Devils, Habakkuk, Michael, January 15th, 1619, the Pleasures of the Early Paradise, Perpetual Almanac for Slon Tudor, and Plays on the Creation and resurrection in Cornish."

The Welsh Westmen are about four times as strong in North Wales as they are in the South. The figures of the northern provinces are given to the synod last week show 33 circuits, with 29,569 members. South Wales has 19 circuits, with 5,559 members.

In "Marletta's Marriage" (published by the Appleton, New York) W. E. Norris repeats his familiar formula for a summer-time novel, which includes a tired lord, a selfish and bored wife, a flirtatious friend, a crime in high life, a trial, a whole lot of explanations covered in the last chapter, and a balancing of old scores and a happy start toward conjugal happiness.

It has remained for a Western banker, George Wilson, of Lexington, Mo., to devise a "Financial Philosophy" which outbravens Bryan. The Nebraska revolutionist proposed to stop with the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1; but Mr. Wilson goes to the extreme of declaring for a coinage ratio of 15 to 1 for the abolition of all forms of paper money and the withdrawal from the banks of the privilege of issue.

Few recent numbers of the Cosmopolitan have equalled that for July. The report of Julian Hawthorne upon the plague horrors in India begins with a vividness of pictorial representation and worded details which casts a large shadow over the jubilee festivities at London. Le Gallienne's rendering of Khayyam's Rubaiyat is sampled in this number; Wells' fantastic serial describing the war of the worlds continues its exciting course and there are numerous other features of almost equal interest.

The Home Magazine for July covers a wide range of poetry, fiction and miscellany and covers it so well that it would take a very old man not to find something in its contents to interest him deeply.

In "Guavas the Tinner" (published by the Lippincott's, Philadelphia) S. Haring-Gould has written an entertaining romance of the Durbin tin mines at the time of Elizabeth.

"My Wife's Husband" by Alice Wilkinson Sparks (Chicago: Laird & Lee) is a Maria Holly kind of story, suitable for those who like that sort of thing.
