Washington, July 6.-The final vote on the tariff bill will be taken in the senate before adjournment tomorrow, a definite agreement, assented to by all parties, having been reached at the close of debate today. The agreement is as follows: "That debate on the tariff bill shall proceed under the five minute rule after 1 p. m. tomorrow, and that the final vote on the bill shall taken before adjournment tomor-

Mr. Allison did not ask that the hour for the vote be set, being content with the positive agreement that it should be some time tomorrow. The limitation of speeches after 1 p. m. to five minutes will bring the debate within narrow limits. The announcement by the vicepresident that the agreement was perfected led to a general exchange of congratulations among senators.

During the day the anti-trust ques tion was debated at length and Mr. Pettus' amendment on the subject was defeated, 33-36. Mr. Allen, Nebraska, again offered the amendment for a quarter cent bounty on beet sugar. It led to lively and somewhat personal speeches from the two Nebraska senators, after which the Allen amendment was tabled, 57-9, the Populists and Silver Republicans being the only ones recorded against the motion to table,

Went Up with a Balloon, Clutching a Sandbag, and Met Death.

San Francisco, July 6.-An advenursome six-year-old boy in Oakland yesterday lost his life through his desire to go up in a balloon. Charles Conlon, an amateur aeronaut, was advertised to ascend in a hot-air balloon at Blair's park and descend by a parachute. He had only a trapeze bar from which his parachute was slung. On the side of the balloon were several sandbags suspended by cords.

Young Bertrand Hill, a son of Chauncey Hill, a Los Angeles architect, saw the inflating of the balloon and other preparations. No one noticed the boy in the hurry and excitement of cutting loose the ropes; but the crowd was horrified, as soon as the balloon rose clear off the earth, to see a little boy clutching one of the sand bags. St. Louis, Mo., July 6 .- A blacksmith of this city has patented a device which will be the death of the shoestring. By its use one can lace his shees with the snap of his finger. A leather tongue riveted with buttons passes up through the grooves and is fastened at the top by the mere pressure of the thumb.

The inventor has received several good offers for his device. Some them were in the way of lump sums, and one offer, which the inventor will probably accept, includes a liberal cash payment and a royalty on every pair of shoes manufactured in which his patent fastener is used. His immediate income under this arrangement will be $10,000 a year.

It is asserted that immediately after obtaining his freedom he joined Mrs. Bradbury at the home of Mrs. Norman Brough, better known as Helen Dare, a newspaper writer.

The friends of Mrs. Bradbury have been using every effort to effect a reconciliation with her husband, who before his departure, ostensibly for Europe, showed a disposition to forgive his erring spouse on condition that she no longer receive the attentions of

Ward. Several messages were wired by Mrs. Bradbury to her relatives in Southern California, all written in a penitent mood and conveying the inference that the arrest of herself and Ward had shattered her romantic dream. Mrs. Fillmore is now a resident of Oakland, Cal., and in her deposition she testifies that she moved from Homer. N. Y., to Scranton, in June, 1855. Some time in 1856 or 1857 she and her husband boarded the caboose of either a coal or a freight train on their way from Slateford to Scranton, and her husband introduced her to Mr. Gould, who was riding in the caboose. Her husband knew Mr. Gould, who was on his way to Gouldsboro, named after him, and where he was then conducting the tannery which has since been one of the historic places thereabouts. Mrs. Fillmore could not say whether or not Mr. Gould was married at that time. He asked how many children she had and she replied two. Then he spoke of his domestic relations. He said he thought witness was very young to have two children, but witness told him she was twenty-two years old, and then he said he had a wife and child, boy or girl. He said his wife lived in

New York state. At that time, she said, he appeared to be a smart, industrious young man, very boyish looking, and did not appear to be over eighteen or nineteen years old. She had received three or four letters from Mrs. Angell's attorney about this matter, but no offers of money. She had only been offered money by John Pierce, who told her the father in response to a circular let- that if she testified to the truth she would get something.
