FELL DOWN THE SHAFT.

Terrible Fate of James Mooney, a Miner of Lowertown.

Wilkes-Barre, July 25.-James Mooney, of Lowertown, near Larksville, employed in Delaware and Hudson No. 2 mine, was killed Friday night. His death is somewhat mysterious, but it is supposed he fell from the Bennett vein to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 360 feet.

Mooney was a company hand and worked in the Bennett vein which is in a "lift" in the shaft. The colliery has been working only half time and operations were suspended for the day 1000, It was customary however, for Mooney to work a full day when the breaker would work only until noon, and he usually reached home about 6 c'clock in the evening. Friday night he did not come home at that time as customary and after waiting until long after 6 his family became alarmed.

At 7 o'clock his son, James, went to Mine Foreman Evan Reese and told him of his father's delay. Together they went into the mine and searched the Bennett vein thoroughly, but no trace of the missing man could be found. Young Mooney then came out of the mine to see a man in Plymouth who worked near his father. In the meantime Foreman Reese and John Meyers, a pump runner went down to the foot of the shart and made a careful search. Near the sump they found an oil can and dinner pail and this led them to believe that Mooney had fallen in the sump in which there were six feet of water. They secured a rope and dragged the sump. At last at 11 o'clock, after a long and persistent search they found the body, which they lifted out of the water by means of the Mooney's head was battered to a jelly and he was otherwise horribly mangled. Most of his bones are broken. Mooney was a cripple, he having been injured in a mine at Pittston about twenty years ago, and he always carwhich was hoisted to the Bennett vein for Mooney to board; and, as it is necessary to give the engineer the bell signal before getting on the carriage, it is supposed Mooney, in his crippled condition, had not sufficient time to get rightly on, when the carringe started, hurling him to his death 360 feet below.

LANCE COLLIERY TO RESUME.

Outlook for the Coal Trade Brightens in Luzerne County.

Wilkes-Barre, July 25.-A few days age it was stated that Lance, No. 11, collery, Plymouth, and Wanamie, No. 18, colliery, Wanamie, of the Lehigh and Wilker-Barre Coal company, had received orders to shut down for an indefinite period. Since the announcement of the suspension of operations was made, however, affairs have assumed a much brighter aspect.

Foreman Jones, of the Lance, who had received orders to take all the mules out of the mine, has now received a countermand to this order and the mules are to remain in. A notice was posted at the Lance at II o'clock Faturday morning to the effect that the colliery will work four days this Coupled with this cheerful outlook comes the news that the Ashley planes will hoist 60,000 tons of coal next week. So, it will be seen that everything points to a general betterment in the anthracite trade.

FIRE RAGES IN A MINE.

Thus Far Efforts to Subdue the Plames Have Been Futile.

Shamokin, July 25.-Fire was discov ered in the counter of No. 10 vein, in Neilson shaft, at a late hour Fri-day afternoon. The flames raged so furiously that all work inside the mine had to be stopped. The gang began at once to fight the fire, but their efforts have been fruitless up to the present time. Eight men and a score of mules were roasted to death by a fire in this mine several years ago. The colliery is operated by J. Langdon & Co., of Elmira, N. Y., and works more regularly than any other in operation in the lower coal fields, employing 900 men and boys. It is not known how the fire was started.

HIS DEATH-BED IN A MINE.

Shamokin, July 25 .- Andrew Walindrie, a miner in the Burnside mine, was found dead in the breast where he worked. Heart disease is believed to have caused his death. It is a very unusual occurrence for a person to die from natural causes in an anthracite coal mine, only one or two other such cases being on record.

MINER'S SERIOUS MISTAKE.

FOREST CITY.

About 7 o'clock Saturday morning, as F. V. Smith was about to light a gasoline stove that is used in his house during the heated season, some of the inflammable fluid that had been spilled into the pan was ignited and the tank was quickly enveloped in flames. Fearing an explosion, Mr. Smith grasped the stove and hurled it through a screen window to the ground beneath, where the blaze was extinguished. His hands were severely burned, but his presence of mind no doubt saved considerable destruction of property.

T. B. Miller, of Wilkes-Barre, was among the business visitors in Forest City Friday.

Friday's excursion from here to Lanesboro was not very well patronized, but those who did go report the best kind of a time.
