With a snort of terror the horses sprang to one side, throwing Darrow Grove -- Troubles of the Hazzle - off the machine, but the knives kept up their destructive work, and all the air was filled with pieces of dismembered scrpents. As soon as he struck the ground Darrow seized a and attacked the rattlers. They so numerous that killed a snake or blow and at last he fought his way through the myriads of squirming reptiles and followed his horses to the barn. They were none the worse for their experience, but the mowing machine was literally gummed up with pulverized rattlesnakes. The bodies of 126 snakes were counted at the scene of the slaughter, and Darrow estimates that there were not less than two hundred rattlers in the bunch. It was a large day for snakes,

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review. New York, July 28.-The dominating in sence of the stock markets strength today was the prosperous grain trade out-look. Probably over half a militon bush-els of wheat were engaged for export to the continent, although only one-third of a million was reported from outports. The favorable weekly government grain report was doubtless a factor in the re-covery of confidence to the disconcertion of the reactionists on the stock market The total sales of stocks today were 395,500 shares.
