EXCURSION TRAIN WRECKED.

Many Pleasure Seekers Have to Spend a Night on the Mountain.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Wilkes-Barre, August 19.—Two sections of an excursion train on the Wilkes-Barre and Northern road carrying members of the Lutheran church of Wilkes-Barre home from Fernbrook park, collided near Dallas tonight, badly wrecking two cars of the forward section and derailing the engine of the second section. Two trainmen were hurt but the passengers escaped without injury.

FLEEING GREEN GOODS MEN.

Successful Scheme to Work the Sharpers for 75 Cents a Clip.

Allentown, Pa., August 19.—Several enterprising young men of this city have recently been making a good thing out of transactions with green goods sharpers. There has been a flood of green goods circulars, Tomlinson in the stereotyped style, with advice to the recipients to telegraph to A. B. Crum, Pocopaco Hills, N. Y., for samples.

LAWSUIT FOR A DIPLOMA.

Boy Wouldn't Speak at Commencement, So the Board Cut Him Off.

Beaver Falls, Pa., August 19.—A peculiar suit to compel the school board to issue a diploma to Lee Tomlinson, a graduate from the High school in this year's class, will shortly come up here before Judge Wilson.

Colliery Withdrawn at $1,500,000.

Shamokin, Pa., August 19.—The Nat'l colliery owned by the Pennsylvania Anthracite Coal company, was offered at Sheriff's sale today.

STATE SNAP SHOTS.

Philadelphia, Aug. 19.—The Daughters of Erin concluded their first annual convention today by the election of the following officers: President, Miss Katharyn T. Flood, of Philadelphia; vice-president, Miss Margaret A. Herr, Great Bend; secretary, Miss Mary E. Fleming, of Reading; treasurer, Miss Kate G. Cavanaugh, of Schuylkill.

GATHERING OF HARLAN CLAN.

Three Days' Reunion of a Great Family at West Chester. West Chester, Pa., August 19.—One thousand people bearing the name of Harlan gathered here today for a three days' family reunion.

BRUIN FOUGHT BUT FAILED TO WIN

Old Pete Miller's Queer Experience in the Wilds of Potter County.

GOT HIS PRIZE MONEY AT LAST

A Two Days' Tussle with a Bear at One End and Old Pete at the Other End of a Rawhide Rope—Neither Able to Get Loose—Bruin Tamed at Last.

A Pittsburg correspondent of the Globe-Democrat writes from one of the wildest parts of Potter county, lives "Old Pete" Miller, a great hunter and an early settler of that part of the state. Pete has killed scores of bears, and has been in the woods in his time, and helped to exterminate the last herd of elk that roamed the Pennsylvania forests.

FOUND BEAR TRACKS.

"One day while I was out hunting for some good places to set some traps I came across some monster bear tracks and followed the trail to a rocky glen, where two red streams met.

THE BEAR FOLLOWS.

"To tell the truth, I had already realized the seriousness of my situation and wanted to get clear of the predicament in which I had been accidentally placed. I tried again to get the rope loose and failing in that, owing to the constant and malicious tugging kept up by Bruin, I set my eyes on the line between two stones, but the confounded rascally old fool of a brute thought I was going to hit him with the stone I picked up, and he gave me a yearning that knocked me sprawling against a tree, and then he came on me with a rush.

BRUIN APPEARS.

"Having no idea that the bear would come out very soon, it struck me that if I could get a firm hold on the rope I would be able to pull it tight and then I would be able to get away till he was reduced to a submissive state through a long fast. By tugging at the rope I managed to get about 10 feet of slack, and I caught a good hitch around my body so as not to impede my arms and hands. I began to climb the rough trunk of the hemlock. It was hard work dragging myself up hand over hand, but finally I reached the first branches and then had to stop, as the line became tight.

THE BEAR FOLLOWS.

"I kept my distance, always walking close to trees that I could use as snubbing blocks in case of emergency. After we had stumbled along for several minutes I followed the example of the bear and took good care to let the bear do all the dragging, the old fellow stopped again and looking at me closely from head to foot, I imagined I heard him say, 'You ain't the biggest fool ever I got tied to, I'll be d—n.' My soon started again, and kept going until night came, when we got tangled up again in the trees and brush and by mutual agreement established a truce and lay down to rest. Neither one of us slept, and while I watched the bear the old brute watched me, and all through the night I heard him growling and chewing, and I hoped and prayed that he would not chew the rope in two and go about his business. I tried to find some stones to use in hammering the larlat in two, but unfortunately no stone could be found.

GETTING A DRINK.

"There was a stream of running water within sight, and by gradually unwinding the rope I managed to reach it, and was quenching my thirst, when I felt as if the old cuss didn't care down to get a drink, too, and began to wallow in the water, and then I managed to get the rope around a nook of a tree, so that I was dragged away from the brook before my thirst was half quenched. While he was drinking I found a sharp edge of a log with which I could have severed the rope, but the suspicious old rascal came at me savagely when he saw me pick up the stone. I backed out of his reach and taking advantage of the numerous stones at the edge of the run, I began to pelt him with all my might. Being cold and hungry, I found the exercise congenial to my nature at that particular time, and never did a pre-arranged base-ball pitcher practice throwing with as much zeal and energy as I manifested at that time. The big brute became terribly enraged when any of the rocks hit him, and he snorted till the woodpeckers and blue jays flew in a terror. I would have been glad to fly away, too, as fast as my legs could carry me, but tied up as I was in that infernal rope among a lot of rubbish with a big bear tugging away at the other end of the line, I felt then as if I really had no use for the new gun and the $35, but it was not the proper occasion to become sad-hearted, as there was something there to face that was worth making any man brave who had any desire to save his life.

CONNOLLY & WALLACE

REMOVAL SALE.

Our store has been the great shopping center during the past ten days. It will be greater than ever during the next ten.

The prices we have placed on our stock to sell it, preparatory to our removal to our new store, are the lowest prices at which good dry goods have ever been sold in Scranton. If you have not visited us yet, come at once; if you have, come again. There is always something that you haven't seen, for in a large stock like ours, and in our limited space, we can only display a small fraction of our goods at a time.

We started out to sell this stock of dry goods, and to make this sale the greatest sale you have ever known. We are satisfied, from the crowds of people who are constantly with us and the favorable comments we have heard, that we have succeeded.

We expect the New Store to be ready about September 1st.
