III BEFORE BREAKFAST. III

There was a remarkable feathered representation at the Prohibition picnic at Mountain Park the other day. Dr. Bird prayed, Dr. Swallow talked and Mr. "Dickie" also made an address. There didn't seem to be any crow in the assemblage, and nothing is said of the presence of a flock of jays.

There seems to be an epidemic of "new" maid servants in this town. A lady on the Hill thought she had struck a hopeless case the other day when, after directing her "green" cook to bring some ice water, she was obliged to wait an unreasonable length of time. She rang the bell, the maid appeared: "Where is the ice water?" asked the mistress. "Sure, I put the ice on the stove to melt," answered the smiling domestic. "It's me that'll bring the water in the minute, for it's a-meltin'

Young Boy Has a Close Call in the Central Mines.

Joseph Langan, a boy about 15 years age, who resides with his parents on Luzerne street, narrowly escaped death in the Central mines yesterday. The lad is employed as a door-tender in the mines. caught young Langan.

He was bruised and cut severely about the shoulders and back. The boy was taken to his home, where he was given medical attendance.

Eleven residents of this city were in the wreck on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road near Syracuse yesterday and six of them were more or less seriously injured.

H. A. Connell, of the jewelry firm of Mercereau & Connell, with his family, had an experience not soon to be forgotten, and which has entailed great suffering, if not permanent injury. They were returning from a week's visit with Mrs. Connell's sister, Mrs. Rollo Jermyn, at Oswego, and were accompanied by Mrs. Connell's brother, George Jay.

They were all seated close to each other in the drawing-room car when it left the track and plunged into the station and over upon its side. The station was a combination building, including an ice house, which was nearly demolished, and added misery to the situation by sending a vast quantity of sawdust over the occupants of the wrecked car and blinding them for a short time. As soon as Mr. Jay recovered his equilibrium he began to look about for his relatives and was horrified to discover a victim whom he supposed to be his sister with the upper portion of her body out of the window nearest the earth. He tried to draw her within the car, but at the sickening sight of the body, from which an arm was torn, he desisted. RESCUE OF MRS. CONNELL.

Just then he saw Mrs. Connell wedged under heavy pieces of the car, which lay across her chest. Mr. Connell having been released from a painful position beneath timbers, and found to have sustained nothing more serious than cuts about the head, they began the laborious work of dragging Mrs. Connell from the debris. She was uncon scious from a blow on the head, the side of her face was gashed and many bruises were sustained, but the chief injury was to her left hand and arm, the flesh of which from above the wrist was completely scraped off, disclosing the bones. Little Louise, the five-yearold daughter, was seriously cut about the head, a deep gash being laid open over one eye and scarcely an inch of skin being left free from injury upon her face. Helen, aged nine, complained at the time of pain in her arm and shoulder, but the physicians who dressed the wounds of the victims said that she was unhurt. Dr. Connell upon examination last evening discovered her collar-bone to be broken, and she was then enabled to convince people that she had suffered much during the long hours of the homeward journey Mr. Connell's son, Harold, was the only member of the party who escaped without a scratch. He was surprised afterward to find that his pockets and clothing in general were crammed full of sawdust, as a result of the expedition

Mr. Jay said last evening that the horror of the situation can scarcely be The car was turned over and the trucks protruded through the floor. A great hole in the roof furnished means of exit to the children, who one by one were lifted out of the aperture. He assisted in the work of extricating Mrs. McQuillan, whose head was crushed flat where it had been dragged between the car and the ground, while an arm was torn completely away. Two little children traveling alone to New York added pathos to the situation, as both were seriously hurt. The little girl who was taken to the Cortland hospital will die. The crushed and maimed passengers will not soon forget the brother. When the car was still ploughing along on the earth the little fellow grasped the hand of the person nearest him and prayed aloud amid the groans and shricks of

ONE OF THE INCIDENTS. There is always a comedy side to even the greatest tragedy. When the train left the track the station agent was sitting quietly in his office with his A moment later the station had changed ends and the agent was sitting out on the grass, feet still crossed, eyes still derailed by a defective switch near the lifted to the point where they had been previously directed. He was unhurt, out considerably dazed.

Mr. Jay said that he was informed by the superintendent of the trackmen that the section gang had been at work that morning on the road, but it was customary to spike all but two ties, but on this occasion, three had been left and the heavy vestibule car had forced the rails apart, causing the accident. The train was late and was running at a high rate of speed.

Last night Mrs. Connell had not regained consciousness after the administration of the anaesthetics necessary for the dressing of her terribly lacer. ated hand. It is as yet uncertain whether she will be permanently dis-abled. Mr. Connell was suffering considerably from the cuts on the back of his head, while nothing serious was apprehended from the injuries received by

Among the other Scrantonians in th wreck were the Misses Annie and Miss Anna suffered a sprain, but otherwise they were un-hurt. Mr. George Phillips, the jeweler, and his daughter, also Miss Shear, daughter of F. W. Shear, were among the fortunate ones who escaped without injury.

THOSE WARRING DENTISTS.

Equity Suit Begun by Dr. Sapp to Protect His Trade Name. John M. Harris, attorney for Dr. C. C. Sapp, yesterday began a suit in equity against the corporation styling itself the "New York Dental Parlors," o restrain it from using the trade name 'New York Dental Pariors" which Dr. Sapp claims was originated and used by him first in this city.

Last March Dr. Sapp opened dental rooms at 134 Wyoming avenue and labelled his establishment the "New York Dental Parlors." He advertised his place quite extensively, and claims that the trade name is well-known and popular by reason of this advertising the "superior character" of the work he has done. About the beginning of August the defendants opened a place at the cor-ner of Lackawanna and Wyoming ave-612 Jefferson avenue, for primary and and proceeded to do business intermediate pupils, opens Monday, under the name of the "New York Den- | Sept. 13.

The idea is to make the telephone a pay station. There are a few in the city now, but the company will extend the arrangement to every 'phone if the MAY TAKE TO THE WHEEL subscriber desires. Each subscriber must guarantee the company 500 calls

The new arrangement will be optional with the subscriber. If desired the old system may be retained. The new plan s particularly meant as a rebuff to the ad-head user of telephones.

A feature of the new system is the fact that no toll will be charged for in-coming calls. It is thought that the system will become very popular with small business houses, physicians and all others where 500 calls per year would suffice. It will also relieve the company of the expense of a great deal of wear and tear now occasioned by the thoughtless use of the telephone by perons who have nothing to say but talk.

The person who now pays $70 to $100 per year will, under the new arrangement, have the difference between $30 and the amounts named to pay for the extra calls. To make $70 an additional forty calls may be sent in during the year.

It is said that the telephone company will be able to offer the toll system to all of its subscribers after the conduits now being placed in the parts of the city, are in working order. The new system is already in use in New York
