GENERAL REEDER AIRS HIS CASE

A Statement of the Trouble with Gover. nor Hastings.

WILL ALLOW THE PEOPLE TO JUDGE

As the Governor Has Failed to Give to the Public the Reasons That Caused the Dismissal of Mr. Reeder, the Ex-Secretary Undertakes to Enlighten the Commonwealth with His Version of the Affair.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 12.-General Frank Reeder late last night gave out the following statement of his side of the disagreement with Governor Hastings, which led to his resignation. The general refused to make comment of any kind on what he had prepared. He

'I have waited since last Wednesday, the eighth inst., for Governor Hastings to give to the public the reasons which actuated him in asking for my resignation as secretary of the commonwealth. This he has failed to do. I. therefore, feel entirely justified in presenting to the public a full and complete narrative of what occurred in the interviews which I had with the governor's private secretary, and the governor himself. This I shall do without any comments of any sort, leaving it for the people of the state to interpret these interviews for themselves. "On the evening of Sept. 9, the governor's private secretary, Lewis E. Beitler, called at my house in Easton, and, with all of the thoughtful consideration and courtesy possible in the performance of an embarrassing duty, presented to me the governor's curt demand for my resignation, which has already been given to the press. I at once expressed my willingness to comply with the governor's desire, and stated to Mr. Beitler that I would, after giving my resignation, go to Harrisburg by the first train in order that I might have from the governor some explanation of the reasons which led to his action. To this Mr. Beitler replied that he was instructed by Governor Hastings to inform me that the governor declined to see me or to afford me any interview. I said: 'You must be mistaken as to your instrucions, as Governor Hastings is a gentleman, and I am a gentleman, and no gentleman declines to receive another gentleman.' He said: 'I can only repeat the governor's instructions to me. said: 'There was but one interpretation to be put upon such instructions, which was that the governor meant to decline all further acquaintance with me, but that I would go to Harrisburg. notwithstanding, and put the governor to the necessity of declining to receive me.

"The next morning I took the train for Harrisburg, Mr. Beitler being on the same train. Before reaching Reading, Mr. Beitler received a telegram requesting him to join the governor at Philadelphia, coming directly to that city from Reading. Shortly after my arrival at Harrisburg I was called to the telephone in the executive office and was informed by Mr. Beitler, who was at the Philadelphia end of the wire, that he had been requested by Governor Hastings to say to me that he (Beitler) had misunderstood his instructions relative to the governor's intention to deny me an interview, and that he had been directed by the governor to see me personally and arrange for an interview at such time and place as would be agreeable and convenient to the governor and myself, and that Mr. Beitler would meet me at Reading at 6 o'clock that evening for that purpose. At our meeting, Mr. Beitler repeated that the governor had disclaimed having given him any instructiins to tell me that an interview would be denied and an interview was accordingly arranged for the following Tuesday, Sept. 8, at Harrisburg.

'On that day, between 12 and 1 o'clock, I presented myself at the executive department, and an interview took place.

"I said: 'Governor, I desire to preface what I have to say by conceding your clear right, not only to ask for my resignation at your own pleasure, but also the broader right of removing or dismissing me from your cabinet with out assigning, or indeed having, any cause for such action. You had this right if you did not like the cut of my clothes or if I was personally disagreeable to you if you wished to replace me with somebody preferred over me. or for any other whim or reason whether logical or otherwise. In recognition of this right. I at once responded to your request by a tender of my resignation; but, I feel, now that my resignation is in your hands, that I have the right to ask you to inform me of your reasons for this step.' The governor replied: 'General Reeder, I expect this will be the most painful interview that I have ever had, but I

The governor then stated, General Reeder says, his reasons for wishing his resignation, which were, briefly, that General Reeder had apparently been drifting away from him and had not exhibited the cordiality of former days; that General Reeder had de-clined to express to newspaper men an opinion of the merits of the controversy between Governor Hastings and Senator Quay at the time Senator Quay gave out his celebrated interview. The governor said:

"'I am also told that you were the author of the platform adopted by the recent Republican state convention, in which I and my administration recelved slight notice, only in a postscript. I am also told that in the Republican convention of your own county of Northampton, a resolution was introduced endorsing my administration, and that you made a motion, which was carried, to lay that resolution of endorsement upon the table. "I am informed by four gentlemen that you had told each of them that, in the event of another political con-test between Senator Quay and my-

elf. you would resign your office as ecretary of the commonwealth and join your fortune with Senator Quay in that contest.' "The governor complained because General Reeder did not give him zealous assistance in the work connected with the capitol building commission. REGARDING THE BOND.

"The governor said: 'I also felt that have the right to complain that you hould have been one of the signers to a bond indemnifying the state treasurer for disbursements made by him to extra employes borne on the roll of the legislature, and which were not authorized by law. Such a bond, if it meant anything, meant to guarantee my action upon an appropriation for the pay of those employes. As to some of them, as you know, I had already committed myself at the opening of the session, and consented to their employment, and the men were employed with my approval. As to them, it was not necessary that anybody should guarantee that I would keep my promise. As to the others, those to whose employment I had not given my approval, it was an undertaking to guarantee my official approval of the employment of persons for whom there was no legal warrant, and I feel that no member of my cabinet had any right to take any such a position so inconsistent with the duties which he ewes me as one of my official ad-"After the governor had finished, said: 'Governor, I will endeavor to take up your objections in the same order in which you have stated them, and offer an explanation to each one in its order: First, as to my failure to speak through the newspapers with yourself and the two senators, let me recall to you the facts. Your interview with Senator Quay and Senator Penrose took place on the last Saturday in June. After that interview you were kind enough to say to me some very complimentary things about my loyalty to you. In the afternoon you went to Mount Gretna and I went to my home in Easton, not seeing you again until Monday noon. In the interval, in the Sunday morning newspapers, there was published Senator Quay's announcement of his candidacy for the United States senate, in the his interview with you the preceding gay. On Monday you prepared your interview for the newspapers, by which any issue arising between you as to the character of the interview was fully raised. After you had prepared that statement for the press, you spoke to me concerning your interview with the senators, and requested of me that I should not make any statement as to what had taken place to anybody. not even to your attorney general, Mr. McCormick. Tuesday morning in the Philadelphia papers your statement appeared. That same morning you went to the camp at Mount Gretna and I accompanied you. On our return in the evening. I was asked by a reporter if I would give him my version of what occurred between you and the two United States senators. Mindful of your injunction of secrecy. I declined to make any statement. Since the conversation in which you requested me not to divulge what had occurred between you and the senators, the subject has never been mentioned between us, and I have considered from that day to this that my lips have been sealed by your own request, and the only reason why I have not spoken with your own expressed wish." HAD FORGOTTEN IT. "The governor here said: 'I believe I do remember some such conversation between us, but I had forgotten it.' "I then resumed: 'As to the Republican platform, I wish to say that I was not the author of that platform. By request. I prepared a number of planks for the platform, some of which were adopted without change, some of which were changed in slight particulars, and others of which were modified out of all recognition. Some of the planks appearing in the platform were not prepared by me at all. Among the planks which I prepared and submitted was one which endorsed in the strongest terms which I could frame, your administration as governor of the commonwealth. On Tuesday afternoon a conference of a number of gentlemen was held, at which there was submitted the sheet of paper, together with a large mass of material prepared by other gentlemen. When my plank endorsing you was read, the criticism was immediately made that I had made the plank endorsing you far stronger than my plank endorsing the president of the United States and the senators. My material was left in the hands of the organization, and the following day I saw what purported to be the completed platform, in which my plank of eadorsement of the state administration did not appear, but was replaced by a substitute which I thought fell short of what was due as a recognition of your official service. I at once complained of this, and, with the aid of Colonel Gilkeson, succeeded in having another conference held, which met after midnight on Wednesday and a third plank was prepared, which was more satisfactory to me than the one of which I complained, and its position in the platform was changed from the end thereof to a place immediately following the plank endorsing the national administration, and the platform as adopted by the convention contained the changed plank in its changed posi-

press, the next day, by some mistake for which I have no responsibility and as to which I have no information, the original platform fell into the hands of the agent of the Associated Press and was telegraphed over the state. submit, therefore, that my action with reference to your endorsement by the state convention is open to no criticism whatever.

The governor here stated: 'I did not know the circumstances which you DECLINED SUGAR COATING. "I went on: 'As to the Republican convention, in my own county, I want to say that the platform as adopted extained a resolution which endorsed your administration. An amendment to the report of the committee was offered from the floor, which amendment consisted of three resolutions, the first of which endorsed you strongly. and especially endorsed you for your vetoes of certain acts of the legislature. The second resolution condemned legislature in very drastic terms, and the third condemned by name the Republican senator from Northampton county. I opposed the amendments and in the course of my remarks stated that no man in Pennsylvania knew better than I how fully you deserved the strongest terms of commendation which could be expressed by any convention; that no man knew better than I the value to the state of your public services; and that no one could go further than I in favoring any strong expression of commendation or endorsement of your public acts; and stood alone, it would meet my hearty and zealous approval; but that the purpose of the authors of this amendment was to disorganize the Republican convention then in session, and that the resolution commending you will be simply the sugar coating upon the pill, and was intended to operate as a gag for me, and I closed my speech by moving to lay the amendment on the table. "The scheme of the persons who had offered this resolution was simply to disorganize the convention, and it was not possible to divide the amendment as submitted so as to permit action on the resolution of endorsement alone without throwing the entire subject open to debate on the floor. "As to the information which has been brought to you by four gentle-men relative to my having told them that I would, in the event of any further fight between you and Senator Quay, resign my office as secretary of the commonwealth and join Senator Quay's force, I have only one word to say-your informants told you that which was absolutely false. The only thing ever said by me which could be tortured into any approach to any such statement was a remark made by me to Dave Martin at the Neshaminy park encampment, in the course of a conversation with him in which he inquired whether there was going to be without any interruption from me, I any further war between you and Senator Quay, and remarked that if there was another fight, he was going to sit back and look on; and I replied: 'That is a pretty smart thing to do, and I would like to do the same.' I had no reference to the interview between further conversation with anybody, except the conversation detailed with Dave Martin on this subject.

> NO FIGHT WITH QUAY. "The governor then said: 'There will be no fight between Senator Quay and me, as 1 intend to go out of politics as soon as my term of office is ended."

"I replied: 'I can't say that.' Touching the governor's complaint trat General Reeder had not been zealous in aiding the governor in his work General Reeder says he reminded the governor that in the earlier stages of the work of preparing for a new capiour than he, but that gradually Attorney General McMormick appeared to supplant him as an adviser of the governor, that he accepted this as an intimation that his services were not desired.

"As to the bond, I want to say there conference as has been painted in the newspapers. There was an agreement to which a number of gentlemen were signers, which agreement was prepared and signed about five weeks before the adjournment of the legislature. You will, of course, admit that the act of 1874, which fixes the force and salaries of clerks and employes of the legislature, is antiquated and out of date The force therein provided for is altogether inadequate to do the work of legislature and the salaries therein established; while fair enough according to the scale of wages prevailing in are altogether too high for scale of 1897. The fact that the act of 1874, does not provide a sufficient number of employes to perform the work of the legislature has long been recognized, and for the last fifteen or twenty cears, the legislature has been compelled at every session to add extra employes in order to have the work fully performed. This was done in 1895, and the amount of money necessary to pay the extra force was provided for in an item in the appropriation bill, which had your approval. At the opening of the session of 1897, the officials of the house and senate, accompanied by the auditor general and state treasurer, called upon you and submitted to you their ideas as to the needed extra force was present in the room, and knew in a general way what was being done. but I never heard from you or from anybody else the details of the agreement which was entered into between you and the house officials and the fis cal officers, except to have understood in a general way that you had assented to their proposition for the employment of extra persons. I never knew until the item in the appropriation bill providing for the salaries of those ployes was under consideration, that there had been any persons employed except those to which you had your consent. About five weeks before the session ended, an agreement was brought to me, with the statement that the temper of the house of representatives was such that it was doubtful whether they would pass any appropriation to pay the salaries of the extraemployes. In the full belief that you were fully cognizant and approved of the employment of these extra officers and understanding from what was said to me that the only risk of failure arose from the attitude of the house, I consented to be one of a number of gentlemen to share with Mr. Haywood ever loss might occur through such a failure on the present house of representatives. As soon as I learned that there were on the list of employes some officials who had been appointed with your previous consent, I stated to you fully all the circumstances connected with the agreement and this was before any action was taken by you upon the item making appropriation for their IT MADE NO IMPRESSION.

"The governor then remarked: "The my mind was engaged upon other mat- ahan becoming his bondsman.

YOU CANNOT CUBE PILES

By Internat Remedies.

The only sure way to cure every form of piles is to use a remedy like the Pyramid Pile Cure which is applied directly to the parts affected and its wonderful healing effects are apparent from the first application because the medicinal properties are rapidly abtissues and sensitive memorbed by branes of the rectum, and the cure is made speedly and almost before the patient is aware of it, every trace of piles has left him.

This is one of the reasons why the Pyramid Pile Cure has been so uniformly successful. It is applied directly where it is needed and where it will do the most good. Not by the roundabout way of the stomach nor by the harsh, barbarous methods of varicus surgical operations and so called systems.

Direct application to the seat of disease is the only rational way, and this is fully accomplished by the Pyramid Pile Cure. If the voluntary testimony of thous ands who have tried this remedy is worth anything then no sufferer has any excuse for longer delaying in giving it a fair trial, knowing that when you do so the Pyramid Pile Cure will have made one more friend, the best possible advertisement we can have. The chief advantages of the remedy are: It cures without pain, the cure is lasting, it contains no poison, and lastly, it is the cheapest and quickest cure yet found. Your druggists can that, if the resolution commending you tell you what it has done for others. Sold by druggists at 50c and $1 per package.

ers and I did not take it in at the time, and your information made no impression upon me."

"I said: 'Governor, I do not understand how that could occur. You will understand that you said to me, that, nasmuch as the item provided for the payment of salaries to persons not authorized by law, you could not give it your approval, and that, as you had no constitutional power to veto a part of an item, you would be forced to veto the entire item. I mentioned to you that such a course would probably result in State Treasurer Havwood's financial ruin, as he had made advances from time to time, according to the custom which had always prevailed, to these employes in order that they might live, and that, if the item was vetoed, he would be compelled to replace in the treasury all the money so advanced. You replied: Well, Haywood ought to have known better than to have made any advances to any of these unauthorized people.' I said: 'That is not the trouble, because this item includes all the officials provided for by the Act of 1874, and Haywood would lose all the money advanced to them. As to the employes who are not provided for by the Act of 1874. Haywood is fully protected. You inquired how he was protected, and I told you that he was protected by an agreement of indemnity, stating the terms thereof, and explaining that I was one of the signers of that agreement.

The governor said: "Well, perhaps that is so, but," he said, "I already knew of the bond, as Haywood had told me two days before your communication that he had such a bond."

After a pause, saying: "I am not sure -perhaps he told me after you had already done so."

General Reeder says he told Governor Hastings that his reply to the statement that he had acted discourteously in not consulting him before announcnomination next year was simply that he had not so announced himself. He says he asked Gilkeson, of Bucks, for the votes from that county for governor, but this was not necessarily be-General Reeder says the day after the interview quoted above he again saw ever was any such bond as has been the governor, who was in company described and there was never any such with Attorney General McCormick and > that he told the governor then. "I had spoken of resigning my office to two persons—to my wife about the end of July, when I became convinced that I had in a great degree lost your confidence, and more recently to Senator Quay. I have felt for some time an unwillingness to remain any longer in your cabinet, but desired before taking so important a step, to consult some person in whose friendship and discretion I had entire confidence. My mind naturally turned to Senator Quay, because I know he is my friend, and because, of all acquaintances, there is none in whose judgment and discretion I have so much confidence. Accordingly, on the night before Senator Quay went to Florida, I saw him Washington and sought his advice on this point. He replied that he thought I must be over-sensitive and his advice was to hold the matter under further advisement." The governor again remarked there yould be no fight between himself and Senator Quay, as he was going out of politics. "In the course of this second interview on Wednesday, I again said to the governor that I did not intend to make any announcement to the public as to the causes which led to my resignation, except to give out the correspondence and that I would refer the newspaper reporters to him for the reasons which moved him in asking for my resignation: but, if any individual or newspaper made the fact of my resignation the basis of any attack upon my personal or official integrity, that I would defend myself. The governor replied: "There will be no such attack, If any newspaper makes any such attack upon your integrity, I will very quickly put a stop to it."

This ended the interview and two hours later I said good-bye to the governor and left Harrisburg." GOVERNOR HASTINGS SILENT.

Harrisburg, Sept. 12.-Governor Hastings said tonight that he has not seen General Reeder's statement, and he will have nothing to say about it tonight.

HILLIARD ARRESTED.

The Detective Gives Bail Before a Wilkes-Barre Alderman.

M. Hilliard, who it is alleged is implicated with General Reeder, Assemblyman Weiss and McLuchenbach in the conspiracy case against John Wanamaker, was arrested in the city Saturday night. A constable was in waiting for him at the Lehigh Valley railroad depot. When the train from Scranton pulled into the depot, the constable confronted Hilliard with the warrant. A carriage was called for and the two frove to Alderman Davison's office.
