B. Iwanowicz vs. D. Langowski, libel. LAST GRAND JURY.

Alderman W. S. Millar Says Some Very Caustic Things About It--Cites Miscarriages of Justice.

Alderman W. S. Millar, of the Eighth ward, yesterday handed down his opinion on the late grand jury, which so severely attacked the aldermen of this city. It was a lengthy opinion and was couched in the plainest English.

"I have no hesitation in saying that the last grand jury was very queer," was one of Alderman Millar's remarks. This statement was made after Alderman Millar in his discussion had cited several cases where the grand jury had blundered.

"One case," said Alderman Millar, "was that of an aged woman who was beaten almost to a jelly by a man. I had no hesitation in saying the woman, bruised and battered, appeared before me, in sending the case to the grand jury. The defendant told her story before those jurymen, she exhibited the marks of the beating, and they ignored the bill and placed the costs upon her."

"Another instance," continued the alderman, "was in the case of one of my officers--Detective Clifford--against a colored man named Fitzgerald. The charges were interfering with an officer and aiding a prisoner to escape. Detective Clifford was arresting a man on West Lackawanna avenue, when Fitzgerald came up behind him and struck Clifford on the head with a cane. The prisoner escaped, while Fitzgerald was arrested. Detective Clifford appeared before the grand jury, told his story and exhibited the cane, which had been broken by the blow. They ignored the bill. Again: Thomas Canavan was the victim of a theft. A lot of tools were taken from his place of business and his suspicion fell upon a certain man. I issued a search warrant and the tools were found in this man's house. Each tool was stamped with Canavan's name. The case was sent to the grand jury, the tools were shown in evidence--and they ignored the bill."

"There you are," exclaimed the alderman of the Eighth, "and these are only a few of the miscarriages of justice perpetrated by this jury. What inference will the criminal class draw; nothing but rob, slash away and the grand jury will throw out the case against you."

Alderman Millar was not in the city at the time the jury made its report or remarks, he says, would have been made before the jury and he would have demanded a retrial of the statements made by the jury that aldermen of the city sent into court too many petty cases. The cases cited by him offers as some of those "petty" cases which were ignored.

ALWAYS ON TIME.

Drama That Depicts Life on Frontier Will Be Seen at Davis.

"Always on Time," is the title of a new sensational melodrama that will be given its initial production in Scranton at Davis' theatre, opening tomorrow for three days. Life in the frontier west among its cosmopolitan people is portrayed with a truthfulness that is appreciated by audiences who have had inflicted upon them frontier plays whose only qualities were their pictures of bloodshed and other acts of violence.

The piece is interpreted by a powerful cast, among whom may be mentioned W. R. Walters, Taylor Carroll, J. S. Stewart, Wm. Turner, C. Jay Smith, Daniel F. McCoy, Mac R. Barnes, W. H. St. James, Minnie Willson, Laura Dacre St. James and Anna Little.

Firemen's Parade at Wilkes-Barre, Oct. 5, 6, 7 and 8.

The Delaware and Hudson railroad will sell special excursion tickets from Scranton to Wilkes-Barre and return on all four days at the low rate of 50 cents.

Tickets to be sold on account of the Firemen's Mutual Benefit association and may be procured of their members or at the Delaware and Hudson depot on Lackawanna avenue.

JUROR COMES TO THE JUDGE'S AID

Arises in the Box and Vouchsafes to Settle the Dispute.

CAUSED NO END OF MERRIMENT

Brundage Case Develops Long Winded Proclivities, and in Consequence Thereof Judge Archbald Hustles About for Help--Verdict for the Plaintiff in the Sum of $2,420 in Case of Delevan Against Carbondale Street Car Company.

No little amusement was created in court room No. 2 yesterday by the action of one of the jurymen who felt himself called upon to help out the court in arriving at a decision in a knotty question.

It was in the case of William M. McAndrew, of Olyphant, against Dominick Redington. McAndrew is an old and decrepit widower, who boarded with his niece and her husband, the defendant. He had some trouble with his eyes and in May, 1894, went to Philadelphia to have them treated. Before going he gave his niece power of attorney to draw his money from the Merchants and Mechanics' bank that she might send it to him as he required it. She drew some $200 more than he authorized her to draw and applied it to her own uses. To recover this money he brought the suit.

After the testimony of the plaintiff had been all presented, Joseph O'Brien and Hon. C. P. O'Malley, attorneys for the defense, argued at length for a compulsory non-suit, alleging that it had not been shown that the husband was in any way connected with the transaction between his wife and her uncle.

HELPING THE JUDGE. Mr. Newcomb, attorney for the plaintiff, was in the midst of his argument, combating the contention of the defense, when Juror Charles Monis, of Moosic, arose in the box and addressing Judge Gunster, bursted out in impatient tones: "Your Honor, there's no question about it. The woman testified with tears in her eyes that her husband made her take the money out of the bank. He's stuck for it, sure."

There was a burst of laughter following the amusing interruption, in which Judge Gunster was constrained to join. Whether or not the volunteered assistance had any weight with the court can not be said, but when the judge finally made his decision it was found that he coincided with the juror's views.

The case was still on at adjournment. It had many interesting features, and was listened to by a large audience during the whole of the afternoon. One particular feature which carried another outburst of merriment was the statement of the defendant that old man McAndrew did not tell them that he was going to a hospital in Philadelphia, but merely said he intended to go some place to get out of Olyphant, as so many people up there had him insured that he feared his days might be unannually terminated if he remained there.

THE REXFORD COMPANY 303 Lackawanna Ave.

THE BLUE RIDGE COAL COMPANY for damages, caused by culm being washed upon his property, occupied the whole day before Judge Archbald and is likely to consume the remainder of the week. Surveyor Edmund Bartl finished identifying his map of the premises during the morning and then the plaintiff was put on the stand to show that the plaintiff was liable for the injury and to fix the measure of damages. He was undergoing cross-examination by Major Warren at adjourning time.

Brundage testified that the creek which carried the culm upon his land formerly flowed in front of his property. At his instigation the borough of Blakely changed the course of the stream and caused it to run in the rear of his lots. The new channel, it is alleged, became filled up with culm and in a freshet, Oct. 10, 1896, the creek left its course and made a channel for itself through the center of his property, carrying with it many tons of culm, which was scattered over the lots and washed into the cellars of the three houses.

VERDICT IN DELEVAN CASE. The jury in the case of Richard J. Delevan against the Lackawanna Valley Rapid Transit company, after being out four hours, brought in a verdict at 4.30 o'clock, allowing $1,920 for the wife's injuries and $500 as the husband's compensation. The verdict, it is said, is satisfactory to both parties.

Judge Archbald is trying to secure an outside judge to assist in disposing of this week's big list. Judge Albright, of Lehigh county, may lend a hand and if he does he will sit in the Superior court room.
