A mistake was made in this column a few days ago in speaking of the drive across from the Boulevard to the reservoir and around to Scranton by way of the South Side. It should have been mentioned that no young man should be allowed to take a young woman over that road unless she is "only a sister to him." and therefore not likely to detract his attention from his horse, for just as sure as he allows his gaze to waver and the lines to loosen, down the whole outfit will go over the precipice unless the horse is warranted to walk a chalf line, or never swerve a hair's breadth from the road. At least this state of affairs would prevail for a mile or two after leaving the new dam, where the road is so narrow that if you were driving and met a bicyclist he would simply have to climb under the horses and vehicle and devise some method of pulling his wheel after him. But anyway it's a delightful road, even if it is a trifle exciting. The writer of this article has been remonstrated with for telling about the glories of this drive in the first place because all the girls now expect their friends to ask them to drive in that direction, and it is expensive. So this postscript is added in the way of an adjustment of the mat-

CONNOLLY & WALLACE'S NEW STORE Most Complete and Best Equipped is

This Part of the State.

Today Connolly & Wallace, who for five years have conducted their dry goods business at 209 Washington avenue, will present for public inspection one of the finest equipped store rooms in Northeastern Pennsylvania, situated at Nos. 127 and 129 in the new Connell building on Washington avenue. A visit to the store last evening, when he finishing touches to the preparation for today's opening were being made by the army of employes, dis-played the full possibilities of this en-every known convenience to the carryng on of a mammoth business. The store room is 40x150 feet in dinensions, with added space in the rear. The ceiling is high and free from unsightly trolleys and "guy" wires, the new cash system to be used in the store emoving this objectionable feature. In he rear are the private offices for B. P. Connolly and H. C. Wallace, the firm members, and also the bookkeepdepartment and ladies' fitting room. The store is divided into four distinct parts, each having sub-sections for the display of special goods. On the left upon entering are the umbrella, notions, dress goods and silks and velvets departments and on the right gents' furnishings, ladies' hosiery and underwear, linens and white goods ergetic firm, assisted as it now is by and domestic cotton goods are shown. The left center is taken up with laces, libbons, handkerchiefs; the right center with corsets and kid gloves. A second section has linings, wash goods, underwear and skirts, and in the rear is the bed department, showing comfortables, blankets, etc. Furs and cloaks are in the L in the rear.

By day the store is lighted by two large skylights and by night ten incandescent are lights, of an improved pattern, and ten six-globed chandeliers give an effect of natural sunlight. The furnishings are all of hard oak of a special design.

The Pneumatic Cash system, for the first time introduced into any store building in this part of the state, is a great improvement over any other arrangement. In operation the system is wonderful and will certainly attract general notice. All that can be seen of the machine in the store room are the "stations" at each section of the store and the brass terminal in the cash department. The clerk places a "cartridge," as the cash boxes are called, into the brass tube at the "station" and in a second or so the cartridge drops into a box on the cashier's

After change is made the cartridge is returned as silently and mysteriously before. The propelling force is air, which is forced by a motor and "blower" into the tubes underlying the floor and sending the cartridges at a terrific speed from point to point. The longest tube is 160 feet in length and the "cartridge" makes the distance in less than four seconds. Connolly & Wallace placed the system in their store at an expense of $4,000. The machine is made by the Samson Consolidated Store Service company, of

EULOGIES OF THE COUNTY'S LAWYERS

Pay Their Respects to the Memory of Hon. Lemuel Amerman.

RESOLUTION ATTESTING HIS WORTH

Members of the Lackawanna Bar Assemble and Give Testimony of Merit of Their Departed Fellow. Judge R. W. Archbald Presided. Addresses by the Three Judges and Many Prominent Attorneys -- Ex-Lt. Governor Watres' Tribute to His Departed Friend.

In response to call by President James H. Torrey, of the Lackawanna Law and Library association, the members of the county bar met in the main court room at high noon yesterday for the purpose of taking fitting action upon the death of the lamented Hon. Lemuel Amerman. There was a very large attendance of lawyers and many friends outside the profession were present to hear and by their presence second the culogies pronounced upon the esteemed departed.

Mr. Torry called the meeting to order and made fitting reference to the sad occasion which had called them together, after which President Judge R. W. Archbald nominated the venerable ex-Judge W. G. Ward to act as chairman. Judge Ward asked to be excused from presiding as he wished to be on the floor and thereupon by motion of Major Everett Warren, Judge Archbald was chosen as chairman.

On taking the chair Judge Archbald aid: 'The suddenness with which the shocking announcement of Mr. Amerman's death came upon us makes it difficult for us to realize fully the regrettable truth. It is impossible to me to adjust myself to the thought that we will not see him among us any more. Sincerely, it is a great loss. I well remember when Mr. Amerman ame among us some twenty years ago. Despite the disadvantages of those times attendant upon a stranger coming here and the facilities that we now have in the practice of our profession eing wanting, he made a most marked rogress professionally and in other directions. He advanced from one position to another both here and throughout the state until he attained a high and enviable position in society. His course at the bar commands the respect of both the court and his fellow members. His geniality was most marked. He was pleasant to meet and deal with. He was as a lawyer and a citizen one whose loss the community mourns sincerely."

JUDGE EDWARDS' TRIBUTE. Judge Edwards-The sudden and unexsected announcement of our friend's leath came like a thunderbolt from a clear sky. We are almost paralyzed with surprise, and each of us asks: Am I next' sed with apparent abundant health and the picture of manly vigor, he was stricken unto death. Dazed with amaze-ment, we feel the power of words is lost to adequately express our saddness and our sympathy. One of the leaders of the bar has left us. He ranked high as a lawyer. He was a thorough student indefatigable worker, profound in knowl-edge, quick of application and rich in the polish and culture of ripe scholar-ship. He was honorable in his profes-sion and private life. Having said that what more can I say of any man.

Ex-Judge Ward-This is not only a great loss to us, but to the whole community, which greatly esteemed him. Yesterday he was in the prime of a ripe, strong manhood. Now he is with us on pure, stainless life for example. He was a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word. He was an upright business man, an honest, conscientious lawyer, a kind loving husband; affectionate, indulgent father, but better than all, a sincere, humble, energetic Christian. I know the Master has said to him "Come higher." Judge Gunster-I was never so su prised or shocked as when I heard the news of Mr. Amerman's sudden demise. I became acquainted with him soon after he settled here, and learned to admire him for his ability and sterling worth, to which I wish to join in bearing testimony. He was a good lawyer, faithful to client and court. By his earnesiness he succeeded in every work he undertook. This was never better instanced than in his work as state reporter. For the first time in the history of the commonwealth, under his management of the office, opinions were reported as soon as handed down. This was a great advantage, and one appreciated by lawyers throughout the whole state. Fred W. Fleitz-Mr. Amerman was one of the very few men I knew before coming to Scranton, and I must say that my early stay here was made pleasant by the sunshine of his friendship. His hospitality and geniality were not the least of his prominent and most commendable qualities. He read the best authors and read them well, and his conversation had a charm that appealed to everything that is good and true in man. I feel like you-I have lost a friend.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

At this juncture Mr. Watres, Major Warren and Mr. Zimmerman, who had been appointed a committee on resolutions, returned and made their report. Mr. Watres reading as follows:

The bar of Lackawanna county assemsled in special meeting directs that the following minute relating to the sudden death upon the seventh day of October, 1897, of its honored and distinguished member, Hon. Lemuel Amerman, be en-tered upon the minutes and published in the daily papers of Scranton; and that a copy thereof, suitably engrossed, be presented to his family.

Tracing his descent from a sturdy, industrious and intelligent ancestry, Mr. Amerman entered upon life fifty-one years ago gifted with exceptional physical and intellectual capacities which were fully leveloped by a thorough education in the chools and universities of this his native state. Three years as professor in the State Normal School at Mansfield, Pennsylvania, served to fix indellibly in his mind the knowledge acquired as a student.

He entered the study of law under the most favorable auspices in the office of Hon. Lewis C. Cassidy, ex-attorney gen-eral of the state and a leader of the bar of Philadelphia, than which none in the country enjoys a higher reputation for brilliancy and thoroughness. Immediately upon his admission to the bar he selected for his field of activity the city of Scranton, then entering upon a period of rapid growth and development, in the subsequent progress of which Mr. Amerman has been no inconsiderable factor. He immediately took a prominent position at the bar and in every line of religious, social, industrial and political activity.

Mr. Amerman was honored by the cor munity by election and by appointment to various public positions, almost from the time of his settlement here. He has successively held the offices of county solici-tor, member of the state legislature, city controller, state reporter and member of congress. Public office was always to him a sacred public trest, and every public duty was discharged with exceptional fidelity, energy and efficiency. His ability and conscientiousness were especially coaspicuous in the discharge of administrative duties of the several offices held by

HIS RELIGIOUS CONVICTIONS. Mr. Amerman's religious convictions were deep and his religious activities constant and unwearied. The sincerity and humility of his religious life is evi-denced by the fact that he found time from the multitude of his public and pri-vate duties to conduct the affairs of a mis-sion Sunday school up to the day of his death.

As would be anticipated from his gifts and accomplishments he was in the highest sense a successful man. His pros-perity was steadily increasing and substantial yet it had no effect upon the simplicity of his life or the carnestness of his industry. To the day of death he was es-sentially a worker. Indefatigable and unintermitted activity were the atmosphere

As a lawyer he was conspicuous for the breadth of his learning; his complete grasp of legal principles; his analytical acumen; and that sturdy common sense which makes legal learning practical and which only can save the lawyer from becoming befogged in the intricacies of nice distinctions. In his relations with the court he was always respectful without subserviency. To bis fellows at the bar he was conteous, considerate and com-panionable. While ready to maintain to the last every right of his humblest client never failed to observe the amenities of the profession.

Mr. Amerman's domestic and social life was most exemplary. Generous, affectionate, wise, pure and cheerful he made for the family of which he was the head that most elevating and charming of earthly places, a Christian home. In the untimely death of Mr. Amerman our bar loses one of its most honored and beloved members and the community one of its most distinguished and successful citizens. We extend to his bereaved fam ily our most sincere sympathy and con olence in this their sad affliction

Major Warren moved to adopt the solutions. In seconding the motion, Hon. M. E. McDonald, who for many years was associated with the deceased in business, said: "He passed away leaving behind him an example that can be well followed. He was honest, trustworthy, energetic. In his early life, nationality, creed, political affiliation, color, never bent his mind-a mind as broad as the limits of his country. If I had the eloquence of the most elo quent; the power of the greatest poet there is nothing that could be said or written that would be more beautiful than that which I would and truthfully could say of Lemuel Amerman.

HIS LIFE AND EXAMPLE.

Ex-Judge W. H. Jessup-We are called ogether once more by the opening of the gates of eternity and their closing or some one beloved. We are here to speak words commemorative of his life. What is the lesson God, in his providence, is teaching us? We who are in life, in strength. It is that we shall be pre-pared, as he was, for the future. We, whose hairs are beginning to whiten; we, who are rich in the luxuriance of middle age or manhood—we can all look at this life as an example to emulate, a life work that we can follow. A nob! Christian man has been translated. We must all in time be translated. Are we ready for the translation?

Ex-Lieutenant Governor L. A. Watres
-The subject of these resolutions was one of us yesterday. Today we look upon him cold in dealth. Yesterday, a fond wife and loving children were happy in his embrace. Today they must lean on a stronger arm. I dare not trust my-self to treat of my relations with our departed friend. Yesterday, as I held his almost pulseless hand, there flashed through my mind the full realization of the character of the man as a states-man, citizen, lawyer, father, man, and I said to myself, he needs no granite column or marble slab to perpetuate his name. Of broad mind, a ripe scholar, able lawyer, dutiful son, devoted hus-band, kind and loving father, a good citizen and loyal friend was Lemuel Amer-

M. J. Martin-I, who have benefitted of his great goodness, would be ungrateful if I permitted myself to sit here si-lent, and not add my measure of eulogy to one dead friend's worth. I knew him as student seldom knows preceptor. I came to him from school, full of definitions and rules and he taught me principles as few lawyers can teach them Few lawyers at this bar knew the prin ciples of law as Lemue! Amerman knew them. He not only knew them, but was quick to apply them. He studied dili-gently and assiduously and when he devolved an opinion it was as good as law. Once he prepared a case, he was ready to defend it against any opposition he might encounter. No matter how great-ly engrossed he was, he always had a kindly consideration for his students, answering their questions as if it was a pleasure. I knew him to be a scrupdously honest lawyer and a manly man a man whom anyone might take as an example.

On motion of Major Warren, secondd by Judge Edwards, it was agreed that the members of the bar should attend the funeral in a body, assembling at the court house, one half hour before the time for the funeral. The funeral will take place this afernoon at 3 o'clock. Services will be conducted at the family residence, Cla Clay avenue. The services will be public but the interment which will take place at Forest Hill, will be private.
