ANNIVERSARY OF LUTHERAN REFORM.

It was Observed Yesterday in St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

Yesterday was the three hundred and eightieth anniversary of the beginning of the Lutheran reform which arose out of the calling of Luther's theses on the church door at Wittenberg, in 1517. As is the annual custom, Rev. A. L. Ramer, Ph. D., pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church, preached a special sermon yesterday morning in reference to the anniversary. The congregation was large and the choir rendered specially prepared selections. Flowers and plants adorned the pulpit and altar space.

Dr. Ramer took for his text the words found in Galatians, II, 20: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." He spoke as follows:

"These words are a part of the epistle lesson for Reformation day. They contain in substance the great truths in God's plan of salvation for the human race. Man's fall and the ruin of his destiny are the occasion which brought the wrath and displeasure of God upon the transgressor. The judgment of God is, according to truth, against the sinner. God has given us a law, but we have broken the law and if it were possible even to keep the law yet 'by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.'"

The ceremonial and the moral law of the old testament served their purpose in proving man's predisposition to sin and pointing to the idea of satisfaction before God. The sacrifice and burnt offerings were the types and the shadows of the coming of the Lamb of God which should be slain for the sins of the whole world. That which the natural man could not accomplish because he was 'dead in trespasses and sin' Christ, the God-man, procured for him; that is, reconciliation with God. He became, in reality, the Redeemer of the world, to give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins; to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death to guide our feet into the way of peace.

"The Festival of the Reformation and Home Mission day was observed by the Sabbath school last evening instigated by the regular preaching services. The service was very beautiful. It consisted of reading passages from the scriptures in a responsive manner, the singing of appropriate hymns, and a short address on missions by the pastor, Dr. A. L. Ramer. The sacrifice and burnt offerings were the types and the shadows of the coming of the Lamb of God which should be slain for the sins of the whole world. That which the natural man could not accomplish because he was 'dead in trespasses and sin' Christ, the God-man, procured for him; that is, reconciliation with God. He became, in reality, the Redeemer of the world, to give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins; to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death to guide our feet into the way of peace.

McCarthy; secretary and treasurer, Richard Shovin. Rev. John O'Toole voluntarily tendered his valuable services as director of the literary circle, an offer which was gladly accepted by the members, who will know his interest and ability, particularly in this kind of work. James May, the former president of the literary circle, acted as chairman at the evening's exercises, which were begun with a few appropriate and cheering words of advice by the Rev. Father O'Toole. This was followed by short, but timely, remarks by Attorney James M. P. Jones, secretary of the central city, and also by John Mullen, president of the Marquette council, James H. McCarthy and Richard Maloney. William Lynch sang and was followed by Thomas Handley, of the South side, who recited with much force and feeling one of John Boyle O'Reilly's most touching poems. He took as the subject of his discourse the needs and mistakes of the young men of the present day, and, though a young man himself, treated this interesting subject in a way which held the strictest attention of his hearers from beginning to end. church to oppose slavery? If so, upon what grounds? Not because it was a cursed system, or that it was not legalized; but because it was a social question and entered into the body politic of civilization that changed by time. These are the grounds and she justly has received due credit for the great part she took in the emancipation of 4,000,000 slaves.

As a society of the church to oppose slavery, optum trade and fight against them as long as they existed, so must it also fight against ignorance in and out of politics because of the calamities of barbarism is that weakness of mind and want of proper information on all social questions of the hour, which prevent savages from seeing a good end of life and a good path to that end.

It is the duty of the church and ministry to promote political and social reforms by delivering the principles of the Gospel to the membership and imbuing them with its fidelity in the various relations which they sustain to the society, the masses, the business, the politics, the commerce and the life of the world. The pulpit, I opine, fails in its mission when it neglects to utter with "clearness, force and earnestness," principles of righteousness and impress upon its members the obligations of citizenship and the responsibility of selecting such political parties as upon the whole they consider best adapted to the most likely to promote what they believe to be the principles of good government.

The ministry should, in principle more than policy, and that ministry whose principle is unchanged for device and cunning is unworthy the name they bear, and is unfit for the office for which they seek. No church or ministry can lay claim to love God, when the brotherhood is hated, and that minister who avoids duty for fear of the responsibilities thereto appertaining, or the dangers threatening, is unworthy of his master, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people for His own possession.
