AFTER THE BATTLE.

Tommy Daniels Had Congratulations Showered Upon Him from All Quarters—Hyde Park Was True.

The politicians on this side were not much in evidence yesterday. Those who had not heard positive results were making diligent inquiries. Here and there a group of men were exchanging stories as to how each had voted, how much each had lost or won, etc.

But one fact seemed to supersede all others. The one pleasant memory remained. Hyde Park had voted for her chosen "Tommy" Daniels, and he had run ahead of his ticket. Clerk of the Court Daniels had a hard time to get to and from his meals yesterday. Friend and foe seemed satisfied to meet in common congratulation when he appeared.

The political club rooms were almost deserted last night, but the few remaining were diligently figuring totals and estimating losses and gains. One circumstance which seemed to appear very evident was the fact that nowhere was heard the familiar "I told you so." Hyde Park was true to her Republican principles.

NEITHER TEAM SCORED.

Two West Scranton foot ball teams met yesterday on the gridiron in a scoreless contest. The teams were the Alumni Athletic association and the Olympics, and the battle was waged on the Washburn street grounds. The features of the game were the long runs and tackles. The officials were: Brown, referee; umpts, Rohan; linesmen, Eynon and Diehl; timekeeper, Storm. The formation of the opposing elevens was as follows:

MINOOKA.

For ways that are dark and things that are mean and unprincipled the notorious gang of thugs that infest this town outrival Bert Harte's heathen soul. For the past few weeks all sorts of depraved and unprincipled actions have been committed and still the offenders are at large and continuing their nefarious work. Last evening Albert Morgans, one of the Republican overseers in the South district, was brutally assaulted while on his way home after the vote was counted. As usual the name of the offenders is as mysterious as the preceding ones.
The superstructure of the new bridge on Connell street is being put in place.

WITCHCRAFT IN NEW MEXICO.

How the Zuni Indians Punish Suspected Sorcerers.
From the San Francisco Chronicle.
The Zuni Indian reservation, comprising 215,000 acres, is situated in the western part of New Mexico, fifty miles from the Santa Fe Pacific railroad. It has a larger population than any of the other eight pueblos scattered throughout the Territory, according to the last census the tribe numbering 1,621 men, women, and children. The Zunis are very superstitious, and their belief in witchcraft, which has led to the execution and torture of many of their members, who have been brought before their high tribunal, tried and found guilty of witchcraft. If the governor of the Zunis or any of his assistants taken sick, the witches are charged with bringing on the affliction; failure of crops, seasons of drought and heavy rains are attributed to their power; calamities of all kinds are supposed to be the result of witchcraft. Only a few years ago a woman was accused of bringing on a plague of grasshoppers to the Zuni valley, and she and her son were executed in a horrible manner.
The sheriff of Valencia county, with an escort of United States cavalry from Fort Huachuca, appeared at the village of Zuni about 26 miles from the village, and demanded the Indians who were accused of maltreating a squaw named Martha, whom they called a witch. Four of the Indians were arrested and placed in the county jail at Lordsburg, at their preliminary hearing September 29 were bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $5,000 each. Tomellie, or Nick, an Indian who had been fearfully tortured, was also taken to Los Lunas as a witness. Miss Sette, the principal of the school at Zuni, and Miss L. M. Williams, a student, who are expected to testify against the offenders, remained at the Indian village under the protection of a guard of United States cavalry.
These arrests were mainly brought about through the efforts of Captain Charles E. Nordstrom, United States Army, who in March last was detailed as acting Indian agent of the Pueblos and Jicarillas. The captain has had many years' experience with Indians in the southwest, and the arrest of the ringleader of the Zuni witch men was a matter of determination. He is fully aroused to the importance of making these Indians understand the supremacy of the government.
The captain in his latest report to the commander of the military affairs graphically states: "The village of Zuni was recently the scene of an occurrence recalling all the horrors of the days when our God-fearing ancestors of New England pliously devoted their neighbors and friends to the stake."
"A poor old woman, seventy-five or eighty years old, having been reported as a witch, the Society of the Priests of the Bow ordered her tortured until she should confess. The emissaries of the society accordingly went to her home in the dead of night, dragged her from her bed, and almost literally dragged her down the five stories to the ground, carried her off to the 'torture corral,' where, tying her hands behind her, until unable to endure the agony longer, she confessed to no one knows what. It was, however, sufficient to satisfy her judges, for she was let down and allowed to crawl back to her miserable abode as best she could. Here she lay for days, no one caring to go near her, or if they had done so, they would have been afraid to display it for fear of showing her fate as a witch, together with the infliction of the same punishment. Two or three days afterward a rumor of what had taken place coming to Miss de Sette, the estimable principal of the school, she was accompanied by her assistant, Miss Faurote, went to the old woman's home, where she was found more dead than alive. For days this noble woman, at the probable risk of her life, and at the certain risk of the trading company of the Priests of the Bow, persisted in her heavenly ministrations to this poor old creature, until finally she was restored to life again and the enjoyment of such health as her shattered constitution will be able to support. This tragedy, tragic in more than one sense, happened last February. At my visit in the June following I saw the victim of this barbarism, who bared her poor old shriveled arms and showed me where the cruel cords of the torturer had cut the flesh through to the bone."

COLOR IN ANIMALS.

How It is Changed or Affected by Food and Surroundings.
Observation and experiment go to show how large an influence food has in determining the color of animals. Everybody knows how easily the color of the yellow canary may be altered to an orange red by mixing cayenne pepper with his food, though it is true that the color change may be produced only in very young birds whose feathers are not completely matured. It is also a matter of experiment that all varieties of yellow canaries are not equally susceptible to the influence of the pepper, and it is a very curious fact that if the pigment that causes the red color of the pepper be mixed with the food of the birds, without the other constituents, yellow color canaries are not in the slightest degree affected by it, while brown birds or the brown feathers of yellow birds become distinctly lighter in hue.

Here is another interesting experiment. The larva of the butterfly normally feeds upon the leaves of the elm, while the small tortoise-shell is added to nettles; but when some imago of the large tortoise-shell were bred from caterpillars that had been bred upon nettles, they showed a wonderful similarity to the smaller species, though the color was nearer to that of the larger. Quite in the same line is the observation that the horn moth exhibits variations in color according as the larvae is fed upon oak, hawthorn, lime, or lilac. Many other experiments have shown a similar effect of food in modifying or completely changing the color of animals.
Among the changes of color that are most perplexing, if one would refer their cause to utility only, is that of the gull, which is blue and white, and is therefore generally allowed to be of protective value. But for the first three years of their lives several common species of gull have a brownish-spotted plumage which is totally unlike that of the older birds, on which fact Mr. Beddard remarks: "It one color be advantageous, the other must be the reverse; and three years is either a considerable period, or it is not."
Another perplexing part of the subject is the color of deep-sea animals. It is an established fact that marine animals can and do live at the enormous depth of more than five miles below the surface of the water. It is also certain that the sunlight does not penetrate to that depth, so that the animals that exist there exist in the midst of more than midnight darkness. Yet the fact is, that brilliant coloration is generally found in them. Of what use can it be? How can natural selection or sexual selection have anything to do with it? It is true, indeed, that there may be phosphorescent light emitted by the animals themselves, and of this there are many evidences; but through the development of eyes, and of its prey by a series of natural "bull's-eye" lanterns, the color of its prey could have no protective effect, but exactly the reverse—Our Animal Friends.
