CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

A very pleasing entertainment was offered at the Hotel Anthracite rooms last evening in connection with the chrysanthemum show and fine exhibition of palms and ferns. Some very fine plants were sent to the manusment with the compliments of George E. Fancourt, of Wilkes-Barre who is known for his rare flowers. It sides the concert by the Mozart or chestra the following selections were rendered: Plano duet, "Invitation to the Dance" (Weber), Misses Irene Da ley and Olma Herring; vocal selections, Mrs. H. Leonard. The entertainment is offered by Trinity choir.

WENDLING'S LECTURE.

A large audience welcomed Hon. George R. Wendling on Wednesday evening at the Academy of Music when he delivered his bridiant lecture, "Saul of Tarsus." Mr. Wendling is fine orator and his lecture was a scholarly effort delivered forcibly and in a very impressive manner. The lecturer was introduced by C. R. Munn, president of the Cycle club. The lecture was given under the auspices of the club and was in every way a success.

VAIL-COOLICAN.

Erwin Vail, of this city, and Miss Mame Coolican, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coolican, of Archbald, were married on Wednesday evening. The wedding was a quiet one, only the immediate friends being present. Vail is the proprietor of the Spring Brook Ice company, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Vail will commence housekeeping in a newly furnished home on Lircoln avenue. Many friends in this city extend their congratulations.

DICKINSON QUARTETTE.

The Dickinson quartette, with the elocutionist who accompanied them last year when they visited this city, will give another entertainment on Fri day evening, Nov. 26. Their music was highly appreciated before and all were pleased with the entire entertainment. A crowded house will doubtless agair, welcome them.

A FAST HORSE.

L. A. Patterson, of this city, received his new tray pacer "Ponita." which he purchased from Silas Jones, of Scranton. The horse has a record of 2.1419 and is the fastest racer ever brought to this city. The price paid was $1,000, Mr. Patierson says: "She is a fine mate for 'Kit Cloud.' When they are hitched together they will heat any team in the county."

Blackstone Nowadays. From the New York Post. How does it happen that Blackstone is now depreciated, not to say underrated?

A partial answer to this inquiry is found in the statement, which is true though paradoxical, that the real Blackstone is rarely read even by profesional lawyers. The practical utility of his work, and the putation which it at once achieved, have tracted from Blackstone's permanen fame. The original book, which derives half its charm from its literary perfec-tion, has of necessity become obsolute as a statement of existing law. Hence it has been edited and re-edited, and altered and realtered, till it has been, as a work of letters, completely spoiled, and the students who think themselves to be read-ing Blackstone are in reality reading a treatise about as like the original "Commentaries" as would be an edition of Gib-bon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" which should have been not only diled but to a great extent rewritten first by Milman and then by Merival and then should have been overloade with an infinity of notes added by au

We may, Indeed, say that, in England at any rate, Blackstone "Commentaries" have been transformed into Stephen's "Commen-taries," and that this transformation has John T. The literary beauty of the "Commentaries" vanished under the attempt of the whole law of England which Blackstone never intended to pro-vide for the students to whom he advide for the students to whom he addressed his lectures, while the time and power spent by Serjeant Stephen on the rewriting of the celebrated "Commentaries" might, if more happily employed, have supplied us with such a logical analysis of the law of England as could have been produced by the author of the celebrated "Treatise on Pleading," and could, in his day at least, have been produced by no one else. The first step to be taken by any one who wishes to appreciate Blackstene's genies is to read the "Commentaries" as Blackstone wrote them, and, if possible, to read them unicumbered even by the notes of subsevide for the students to whom he adcumbered even by the notes of subs quent editors.
