REEVE JONES' CONCERT.

Brilliant Musical Event in the Jackson Street Baptist Church—Artists Who Participated in It.

The Jackson Street Baptist church was filled to overflowing last evening on the occasion of the Reeve Jones concert, which was given for the benefit of the Tabernacle Congregational church, but owing to the large number of tickets sold, it was held in the larger edifice.

Mr. Jones was assisted by Miss Cordelia Freeman, T. R. Williams, of Pittston, and J. W. Jones, the solo bass of St. Luke's church. Walter Davis gave pleasing piano accompaniments to the vocal numbers. The programme was one of great excellence. Mr. Jones rendered a number of piano solos with the highest beauty which characterizes his work. His perfection of technique was never heard to better advantage, particularly in his Liszt number, "Lucia Di Lammermoor." That he delighted his audience in the second group of selections it is unnecessary to state, as therein were included three Welsh subjects, "Heddyd," "Gadlys," a weird, old little composition, with a palace for background, and a duo of marked brilliance presenting the theme.

The third was Mr. Jones' own arrangement of "Aon of Harlech," most difficult of execution and full of color and fire. He also played three other brief numbers. An Octave Study, by Kovacs, a delicious Chopin Nocturne and an arrangement of a National Air, "Land of the Forefathers," which holds a wonderful fascination not alone to the Welshman, who loves it, but to every listener who hears the plaintive tender melody in its insistent sweetness.

Miss Freeman sang the brilliant waltz song, "Delight," the rare quality of tone and the great compass of her soprano were given considerable scope in this selection, and perhaps in no other is her admirable attack more satisfactorily shown. Her staccato work is bewilderingly clever, and the fresh purity of tone and thorough control of her flexible organ are an unending pleasure. She also sang the lovely "Villanelle," which attracted so much attention last season when sung here by Yaw. She received several encores. Her responses, the beautiful "Lullaby" by Norris, and a Welsh air, were received with great enthusiasm.

T. R. Williams, the well-known tenor of Pittston, was in fine voice, and sang most artistically "On the Goodwins," by Pizzoloni. The beautiful solo, "For All Eternity," called forth hearty encores, in response to which he sang Adam's "Holy City" with great feeling and pleasing interpretation.

J. W. Jones had a prominent place in the programme and fulfilled the expectations of his many friends by his solos. He gave an excellent rendition of the strongly dramatic song by Piusutti, "The Raft," concluding by Bullard's "You Shall Not Go." He was also heartily recalled.

The concert was in every respect a

THE BRADFORD CONCERT.

Those who appreciate good music, either vocal or instrumental, have rarely been treated to an evening's enjoyment which was as pleasant as the concert given last evening by the Bradford Trio, of New York city, at the Plymouth Congregational church.

Though the weather was unfavorable and other similar affairs were being held in West Scranton, a fairly good audience heard and thoroughly enjoyed the concert. The Trio is composed of two sisters, the Misses Cecelia and Charlotte Bradford, and their brother, John Bradford. Miss Cecelia Bradford is a talented violinist. Her numbers on the programme consisted of "Zigeunerweisen," by Sarasate; a two-part solo, "Romance," by Robaudi, and "Serenade Badine," by Gabriel-Marie. In addition, Miss Bradford played a duet with her brother, the latter, and in trio, Miss Charlotte Bradford playing second violin. Miss Charlotte Bradford is the vocalist and elocutionist of the party. Her recitations, "The School Man's Courtship" and "The First Spout," were but partial indications of her undoubted ability. Her vocal selection was a two-part piece, "Alta Stella Confidante," by Robaudi, and "Celeste," by Nevecomb. John Bradford indicated his ability as a pianist by playing such difficult selections as "Concertstück," by Pop, and the "Mazurka de Solon," by Doppler. The trio opened the concert with the "Serenade," by Thal, and concluded it with an arrangement of "Pavane" by Gounod. Miss Cecelia Bradford is a pupil of the famous Madam Camilla Urso, who was herself a pupil of the great "Ole Bull." So successful was last evening's concert that an effort will be made to have the Bradford Trio appear here again.

St. Leo's Literary and Debating society held another of their interesting literary sessions last evening in St. Leo's hall on North Main avenue. Thomas F. Murphy presided. The feature of the evening was the debate upon "Resolved: That labor helps the world more than capital." The affirmative debaters were: P. J. McAndrew, Richard Loneragan, and P. J. Gilroy. Their negative opponents were: John H. Devine, John Cronin and P. H. Burke. The judges, who decided that the affirmative side had the better of the argument, were: James Deegan, Daniel Regan and James Cusick. Joseph Martin gave a special reading; William Keegan read an interesting essay, and James Cavanaugh recited in an able manner. John F. Durkin, as critic, offered several timely suggestions to the participants. At the conclusion of the exercises chairs were then passed around and the remainder of the evening was spent in pleasant conversation.
