EXPERIENCE OF FOUR LITTLE BOYS

Attacked by John Waldoer on South Washington Avenue.

BADLY TREATED ONE OF THEM

Had Joe Dolan on the ground and was Choking Him When the Cries of the Boy's Companions Brought Arthur Gordon to Their Assistance. Waldoer Was Placed Under Arrest by Patrolman Peters and Locked Up for the Night.

Four little boys, shivering from the cold, were crouching in the small archway for pedestrians under the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western tracks on South Washington avenue, last night, when along came a man, tall and fierce looking, and grabs one of them.

Now, the little boys are just ordinary youngsters, poorly clad, and a couple of them work in the breaker. There was Tommie Gerrity, 15 years old; Willie McGill, two years younger; Harry Mannick, 14 years old, and Joe Dolan, the youngest boy of the quartette, 12 years. All live with parents in the South Washington avenue flats, and as is the way with small boys, poor in purse but rich in health, they had just ended a harmless ramble about the city and were going home when the rain came down in a torrent. So they sought shelter in the archway.

Willie McGill had just told his companions how lonesome it was under the circle of masonry. Their voices sounded sepulchral. A great place for a robbery here, eh, Tom? said Willie. "You bet," drawled Gerrity; "no one'd ever know what struck 'em in here."

Just then the figure of a tall man appeared in the way from the tunnel. The boys were very still.

GRABBED JOE DOLAN. The figure approached. When he reached the boys they suddenly shot out his arm and grasped Joe Dolan. Dolan's coat was slippery from the rain and he jerked himself loose. The three other boys had begun an escape, but the strange man, turning quickly around, laid a heavy hand on Tommie Gerrity. The boy cried out from pain.

"No, you don't," muttered the man warningly; "shut up or I'll kill you." Tommie's cry was to cry out. "Oh, please, mister, let me go, let me go, you're hurting my arm; don't, don't!" he was saying in piteous tones.

The strange man uttered an oath and dragged the boy by main force through the tunnel and out into Railroad alley, in the rear of Hunt & Connel's store, through the mud and slime and about fifty feet from the opening of the dingy and dirty thoroughfare.

Then he put the boy upon the ground and pinned him with his knees. His hands were on the little fellow's throat and choked off his cries.

"I'll kill you, you little wretch!" exclaimed the big fellow. Just then help arrived. Tommie Gerrity's three friends had not been inactive while their companion was being dragged away. They had been shouting at the top of their voices for help and a man named Arthur Gordon, happening along, was informed of the brutal assault.

SAID HE'D KILL HIM. When Gordon reached the mouth of the alley the strange man had his hands on the boy's throat. "I'll kill you," he was saying. "Let go that boy," yelled Gordon with more menace than grammar in his words and running up he caught the strange fellow by the shoulders and tossed him to the ground.

Gordon is six-foot and built for the center of a football team. The strange man picked himself up and started down the alley toward the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western station on a run. But Patrolman Hezekiah Peters had heard the noise and in four seconds afterward the doughty blue coat had three hands through the alley after the fugitive. He was captured near the Wyoming avenue entrance to the alley.

With his prisoner Patrolman Peters went to the central police station and handed him over to Desk Sergeant Deiter. The fellow was at once locked in a cell and a charge of assault and battery, without provocation was entered on the docket.

The four youngsters accompanied the prisoner to police headquarters and reported the matter to the duty reporter. The story, Tommie Gerrity was covered with mud and was even then sobbing as though something was still hurting him. He will appear against his assailant at 10 o'clock this morning.

The prisoner gave his name as John Waldoer and his residence, Washington avenue flats. No such name appears in the latest directory. He is tall, dark complexioned, black hair and has a wild look in his eyes.

THE TIED-UP JURY AT LAST RELIEVED

Judge Archbald Takes the Bothersome Stone Case from Their Hands.

VERDICT DIRECTED FOR PLAINTIFF

Myers Gets a Verdict of $750 Against His Brother-in-Law, Who Had Him Illegally Imprisoned--Milk Dealers Come Into Court with a Trivial Dispute--Damage Case Against the Borough of Winton is Non-Suited. Other Matters in Court.

When Judge Archbald came on the bench yesterday morning and learned that the jury in the Webster-Widmayer case was still as far apart as ever, he sent out for them and without much ado took the case out of their hands and directed a verdict for the plaintiff in the full amount of the claim, $7,000 and interest.

The man who caused the tie-up, it is said, is Thomas Campbell, permanent man at the Chemical Engine house. The eleven were heartily thankful to be relieved of the case, as may be believed.

In the case of Andrew S. Myers against William P. Little, the jury came in yesterday morning with a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $750. Myers sued for $5,000 damages for false imprisonment. The parties are brother-in-law and live in Clark's Summit. Little secured the management of Myers' mother's estate and attempted to erect a line fence between the adjoining farms of mother and son.

REMOVED THE POSTS. Myers, after having given notice of his intention, removed the fence posts and piled them up on the roadside. For this Little had him arrested, charging larceny, and in default of $500 bail "Squire A. A. Nichols committed him to the county jail. He was incarcerated twenty-four hours before bail was finally secured. The arrest was malicious and unwarranted by the offense, and for the injury done his reputation he demanded $5,000.

A $25 dispute between two city milk dealers, Joseph Schreiber and Charles Shedd, was decided before Judge Archbald. Both men secure their milk supply from the same part of Scott township. Schreiber suggested that they go shares in building a warren house, there and Shedd agreed. Both used it, but Shedd, it is alleged, refused to come up with his half of the cost of construction and hence the suit. Shedd contended that the expense of the ice house, which was left to Schreiber to build, was greater than agreed upon, and again that it was not located at the point mutually selected. The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $14.62.

CASE OF MARSHALL. The case of John Marshall against Simon Rice and Joseph Giragosa was on all day before Judge Edwards. It is a suit in ejectment for a small strip of land in the rear of Penn avenue, near Linden street. Marshall claims a paper title and the defendants allege ownership by occupancy over twenty-one years. S. B. Levy represents the plaintiff and J. C. Maloney and E. C. Newcomb and R. L. Levy the defense. The small-pox placard damage case of Hotelkeeper Andrew Simonyk against the borough of Winton suffered a non-suit yesterday morning. The plaintiff moved to amend by making the Winton board of health a co-defendant, but Judge Archbald would not allow the motion and a non-suit was directed to enter.

All the jurors except those empaneled in the Marshall-Rice case were discharged at noon, there being no cases open. The Jones divorce case, which was expected to come up yesterday and which attracted a large number of spectators in the main court room, was postponed until next term.

ASK FOR A NEW TRIAL

Application for Another Hearing in the McHugh Case. Another new trial has been asked for the McHugh case. Major E. Warren, Col. F. J. Fitzsimmons and John F. Scragg, representing the defendant, Mrs. Michael Hand, executrix, yesterday filed a formal application for a new trial and the reasons upon which they base their application.

In addition to the usual allegations of error it is charged that the trial judge erred in refusing to allow them to show circumstances attendant upon the transfer of the judgment from Anthony J. McHugh, and also in permitting the plaintiff to call witnesses to show that the defendant executrix had made improper overtures to persons to secure them to testify as witnesses, and had made improper proposals to Martin Ferguson, looking toward an interference with jurors, the evidence not being properly rebuttal

FOOTBALL.

In twelve years Yale has won nine games from Princeton and lost three. The Yale eleven has established a record for endurance that will be hard to excel. In two big games the men who started in for the blue have been on the field, in each instance, at the finish.

De Quilley or Chamberlain will likely be elected Yale's captain for next year. The tackle has had more experience, but the little quarter is a more shifty player and greater general. De Saules is the favorite.

Yale's team is better than Princeton's and as good as Harvard's. But Pennsy is better than three Harvards. How much better Pennsy than Yale or Princeton? Nobody will ever know, perhaps, for Pennsy is "such an inferior university, don't you know?"--New York Evening World.

BASE BALL.

Tom Loftus will make a liberal offer for Frank Houseman. The salary limit in the Texas league has been fixed at $80. Big Jack Stivett hopes to become a regular outfielder next season. Earle Warren's missionary efforts to kill the hunt were wasted on Ned Hanlon.

Jack Glascock has joined the commercial tourists, and is on the road for a Wheeling trip. The cranks of Cincinnati are taking a vote on the question of which of the old players in the outfield, Miller, Burke, Hoy or Holliday, is to be traded, or farmed, or released by the management. It is given out that one of the four is to go. Holliday has the popular call.

Arthur Irwin could have been installed in his old berth as manager of the Phillies and the offer to succeed Stallings was made through a near friend of John I. Rogers. Arthur, however, promptly refused to give up his Toronto job for a handful of Quakerbuck Duces and Jokers.

Sometimes a player who is classed among the "great-if-they-want-to-be" variety is given credit for an ability that he does not possess. Cincinnati has had some experience along that line. Elton Chamberlain, who was traded for a couple of seasons after he had reached the turn and was headed for Hasbeenville. Defeat followed defeat, but still the wise men said: "What a magnificent pitcher Chamberlain would be if he only tried to pitch!" When Cincinnati finally cut him off--what was the result. He failed to prove strong enough to hold on in minor company! The bluff that drew much salary in Cincinnati don't wear well anywhere else.--Cincinnati Post.
