Representatives of Two Y. M. I. Councils Will Meet in Mears' Hall.

Monday evening next the members the Young Men's institute, of Scranton, Minooka and Dunmore, will inaugurate a series of debates for self Improvement. Although the opportunfties of many of the members of the Young Men's institute for obtaining an education are very limited still, animated with a desire to develope the tal-ents which the Almighty has bestowed upon them, they are making use of every means within their reach to secure a better education. In Mears' hall Monday evening the first debate will take place when they will give to the public an evidence of their earnestness and zeal in the work of self-education. The subject for de-bate will be "Resolved that the government should own and control the railreads and telegraph systems," and it will be argued by members of the St. Brenden council of this place, and John Boyle O'Reilly council, of the central city. The St. Brenden debaters will have the affirmative of the question and those from John Boyle O'Reilly council the negative. Three members from each council will debate. Other features of the programme will

FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral services of the late Mrs.

John E. Lewis, of 218 South Hyde Park avenue, were held yesterday at the residence. At an early hour the friends gathered at the house to tender their last sad tribute of respect. The hand-some broadcloth casket, in which the remains lay in the calm of death, was strewn with exquisite bouquets and arranged about it were many beautiful designs, all silent testimonials of the esteem in which the deceased was held. Rev. H. H. Harris, D. D., pastor of the Taylor Baptist church, officlated and preached the funeral sermon. To the family he offered the consolution of an after meeting; to the friends the remembrance of the dear friend only separated from them for a time, and to all the love and fellowship of Him who gives and takes. A very impressive part of the services was the singing of the selections by a quartette. The selections are all recent compositions of Mr. Lewis, and were very beautiful as given by the singers. At the conclusion of the services, the remains were viewed and then borne to the Washburn street cemetery, where interment was made.

A FRANKLIN EVENING.

The bi-weekly session of the Pickwick Literary society was held last evening at the home of Miss Ida Lewis, of 367 North Hyde Park avenue. was a Franklin evening and proved to be very interesting, many new facts in reference to this great American being brought out. The sketch of the "Life and Public Services of Benjamin Franklin" was given by John J. York. Harry Niemeyer dealt with Franklin's career as an author and journalist. The members then gave a series of short sayings from some of Franklin's works. Mrs. York gave a special reading, and the question box was brought into play. Quite an original idea was introduce? in the form of twelve quesflons relative to literature. These questions were read by Miss Rahel Powell, The literary part of the evening was completed with a short review of the November magazines by Miss Marion Hutchinson.

Sermon of Rev. James Hughes in Wayne Avenue Baptist Church.

WAS AN ELOQUENT EFFORT

He Held That It Was Not True That There Is No Such Thing as True Friendship in the World .- Services in the Churches Tomorrow .- Two Paintul Accidents .- Some of the Current Happenings of the Day. Of a Personal Nature.

The Rev. James Hughes, of Scranton, late of South Africa, conducted the special evangelistic service last night in the Wayne Avenue Baptist church and preached on the subject of Manasseh's possessions on both sides of the river Jordan. After a felicitous introduction Mr. Hughes said that of every Christian it might be said he has pos sessions on either side of the river. Then he continued: "The church of God is on both sides of the river-

"One family we dwell in Him One church above beneath Though now divided by the stream The narrow stream of death."

."Our friends are on both sides of the river. Some people talk as if there was no such thing as true friendship in They declare positively world. that the term is a misnomer. have said that the church yard would not hold their relations, but that there would be room for more than all their true friends in the pulpit. This is not generally true.

"There is much genuine friendship among all classes of the community. This sweetens life, and gives a healthy toole to the nobler elements of human character. Some people are so constituted that they could not exist scarcely unless they felt that they had some true friends in the world. It is very pleasant to hear the huntsman blow his horn which awakens the slumbering schoes of the hills, but how much more pleasing to know that there are hearts that beat in sympathy with our own and that every throb of sorrow and every note of joy awaken echoes in the breast of our friends-

Of all the gifts which heaven bestows There's one above all measure, And that's a friend midst all our wocs A friend is found a treasure.

"Yes, there is much true friendship and many true friends in the world but many of us have a greater number who have crossed the river. Has death changed them? Do they still feel the attachment of friendship? Jesus Christ died and still He seemed to possess the same noble feelings of love after He had been raised from the dead for we read of Him saying "Go tell my disciples and Peter.'

"Refere He'was crucified He appears to have shown much tender solicitude for Peter, and almost the first thing He did after His resurrection was to exercise the same loving regard for the man who had proved a defaulter in His fidelity to the Master. Have the feelings of our friends changed? Can they us? Do they influence us? When fathers and sons of Ancient Venwent forth into the darkness to fish, the mothers and daughters went out on the beach and there in the dark stillness of the night they would sing two lines of a hymn and then the hus-The funeral of John D., the young on of Mr. and Mrs. John Marsh, of North Rebecca avenue, was held other two lines of the same hymn, and bands and sons who could not be seen, who knows that but for this dull, opaque, unetherial nature of ours we hear the singing on the other side of the river.

"However that may be we thank God that friendship does exist and that it often proves aleniative to sorrow and a healing balm to a bleeding heart. Friends we have in this world, but mains were borne to the Washburn many of us have a majority on the other side the stream. The home of the Christian is on both sides of the river. The nativity of his spiritual life is heaven, the nativity of his physical life is earth.

"Cf the body it is said dust to dust, that is, let it return to the place from whence it came, let it go back to the place of its nativity, but of the soul it is said that it returns to God who gave it. He is born from above, so Heaven is his home. While body and soul are united it might be said that his home is on both sides. "While here his nobler, his heaven-born nature, often sighs for deliverance and now and again we may hear him saying 'I would not live always,' Why? Because he is living in an enemy's country while here: moreover his place of abode is so far away from the great metropolis, and more than that the old tenement is so frequently out repair, that a self-imposed tax has to be made so frequently in order to keep it anything like tenantable. When it shall foll and be desolved then the real name returns to that building of Ged, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

"The work of the Christian is on both sides of the river. Heaven is a place of glorious service, they serve Him day and night. We are now serving our apprenticeship. We are engaged at present in the workshop where the barns are made, but in heaven they will be played.

SOUTH SCRANTON.

The South Scranton branch of the Albright library was opened Thursday in the Manley building, on Pittston avenue. Miss Janet Jones is in charge of the branch. Those who desire to enjoy the conveniences of the delivery station must register and get a care at the central library. Twice a day, if the demand requires it, the books which are asked for on the cards of the patrons will be conveyed from the Albright library to the station. The rules governing the use of the ad vantages of the main library will be enforced at the station. The branch library is pleasantly situated, cheerfu in appearance, and well lighted. For the present it will be open from 2 to p. m. Sixty or more books for refer ence, and others of interest to the younger readers, have been placed there for use in the rooms, and others can be added in the future. Also some twenty-seven standard and popular periodicals are taken, suitable for read ers of all tastes, both adult and juvenfle. The books and periodicals are on the shelves of cases placed around the rooms, free of access to the readers and under the oversight of the attendant in charge. It is not feasible, nor intended, to place there any books to be taken out for home reading. The delivery station arrangement give acmmodation for that purpose, howver, by means of a daily exchange of losed hampers, or baskets, between the station and the main library in the Albright Memorial building.
