

HATFIELD TAKES ROUGH ON RATS

A Wilkes-Barre Lover Becomes Desperate on Being Jilted.

HIS BEST GIRL WENT BACK ON HIM

The Love Sick Youth First Attempts to End All by a Stroke of the Razor, but is Rescued—He Then Buys Rat Poison—Dr. Geist Succeeds in Saving His Life.

Wilkes-Barre, Dec. 10.—The Times this evening gives the following account of the attempt at suicide made by a young citizen who has been jilted by a pretty girl:

Gilbert Hatfield, a young man of 21 years, tried to end his life last night by taking a large dose of rough on rats. He attempted the rash deed because the young girl whom he loved refused to have anything further to do with him. Hatfield is a well known young painter, 21 years old, and living with his sister, Mrs. John Hall, on Hunt's alley. He paid marked attention to Mary McAdams, a pretty young girl of the same age, who was a domestic in a River street family.

The girl's friends did not like Hatfield and the girl finally refused to have anything more to do with him. This got proved on the young fellow's mind that he threatened to kill himself if she went back on him. He called to see the girl at her aunt's home on Jackson street last evening and she refused to receive his attention. He said he would kill himself in her presence and took a razor from his pocket and drew it across his throat. The girl knocked the weapon from his hand when he made only a slight gash.

Hatfield then came down town, bought a box of rat poison and swallowed the contents, enough to kill six men. He then notified the police and was placed in the station house and Dr. Geist summoned. The doctor worked with him from midnight until 9 o'clock this morning and succeeded in saving his life.

The foolish, love-sick youth is still quite sick, but during the morning asked that the girl be sent for. He said they were engaged to be married, but that her friends objected.

The girl was seen at her aunt's home on Jackson street. She is a pretty, modest young lady and feels keenly the notoriety given her by the rash act of Hatfield. She says they were not engaged and that she was forced to keep company with him because of his threats to kill himself. She refused to see him and said she would have nothing more to do with him. The young lady is of a respectable family, all of whom deplore her connection with the case.

THE REBEKAHS ENTERTAIN.

A Visit to the May Griffin Lodge at Clark's Green.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.

Factoryville, Pa., Dec. 10.—Last Thursday evening, Paulowna Rebekah lodge, No. 55, I. O. O. F., through an invitation, visited "May Griffin" Rebekah lodge, No. 84, I. O. O. F., at Clark's Green, Pa., who right royally entertained the Rebekahs and brother Isaacs from the neighboring village. The lodge room, the home of "May Griffin" lodge, in itself presents a home-like and social appearance, and as soon as one enters he is at once impressed with the following: Mr. and Mrs. A. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Brown, Mrs. A. B. Rought, Mrs. George Carr, Miss Elizabeth Travis, Mrs. Amel Harman, of Factoryville, Pa.; Mrs. S. N. Bayley, Carbondale, Pa.; District Deputy Grand Master Mrs. G. C. Skilhorn, Mrs. C. A. Moore, Mrs. G. P. Millet, Mrs. Mary Mertz and Mrs. Charles F. Van Nort, of Scranton.

The Rebekah members from Paulowna lodge were profuse in their praises of the treatment that they received, and will long remember their first visit to "May Griffin" lodge.

Those who were among the visiting members were the following: Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Brown, Mrs. A. B. Rought, Mrs. George Carr, Miss Elizabeth Travis, Mrs. Amel Harman, of Factoryville, Pa.; Mrs. S. N. Bayley, Carbondale, Pa.; District Deputy Grand Master Mrs. G. C. Skilhorn, Mrs. C. A. Moore, Mrs. G. P. Millet, Mrs. Mary Mertz and Mrs. Charles F. Van Nort, of Scranton.

HAD TO GIVE IT UP.

"Mother's Column" Was a Success Until He Had Personal Experience.

From the Chicago Post. "Yes," said the editor, "we had to give up that mother's column." "Dear me, I don't see why," answered the sweet young thing. "It seemed to me it was invaluable." "Yes, that's what we all thought, including the very bright young women who wrote it," admitted the editor. "There didn't seem to be any problem of the home that she wasn't qualified to settle. But she finally married." "That didn't lessen her ability any, did it?" asked the sweet young thing in surprise. "No," replied the editor slowly. "Of course she knew just as much as she did before, but somehow she didn't seem to be quite so certain of it. However, she kept up her work, even if she did show that she occasionally had doubts that never came to her before. She was a little shy as to some points regarding the management of the home, but she still knew all about the training of children, and, of course, that's the principal feature of a mother's column." "Of course," rejoined the sweet young thing. "At last, however," continued the editor, "she became satisfied that she was not so competent to lay down rules and decide knotty problems in the line of the management of a nursery."

MOTHER MOUNTS THE STONE PILE.

Heroic Effort to Induce a Son to Earn an Honest Dollar.

Williamsport, Dec. 10.—Because her 15-year-old son refused to work at breaking stones on the stone pile conducted by the poor board of directors, for which they pay laborers $1 per day, 60-year-old Arnes Boatman today took her son's place on the pile with a score of other laborers.

of men and hammered until she became so weak she could work no longer.

The foreman of the laborers attempted to dissuade the woman from going to work, but she said she wanted to shame her son.

ACCIDENT AT HAWLEY.

Resulting in the Death of Augustus Wegge, Jr.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Hawley, Dec. 10.—Augustus, the 10-year old son of Augustus Wegge, met his death in a most shocking and peculiar manner today. Gussie, as he was called, was alone in the house at the time of the accident, his mother having died a few years ago. This morning his father went to Honesdale, and his three brothers went about their several duties on the farm. One of the boys, on returning about 11 o'clock, accompanied by a neighbor, and found little Gussie hanging from a roller toilet dead.

It is surmised that while at play he put his head in the roller toilet and started to turn around the fowel, fighting around his neck, and before he realized what he was doing he began to strangle and was rendered powerless to extricate himself.

MILKMAID IN A COW'S FIGHT.

Brute's Hostility Toward Brute Saves a Woman a Horrible Death.

Pottsville, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Elmer Moser, of East Coventry, Chester county, was badly gored by a cow last evening. While she was engaged milking, two of the cows began fighting, and finally one of them attacked her. Deep wounds were made in the body of the woman, and she was saved from being gored to death by the addition of animal leaving her to fight another cow.

Bay State Gas Receivers.

Philadelphia, Dec. 10.—Judge Dallas in the United States circuit court today heard arguments on the motion of Thomas A. Baxter, of Boston, for permission to intervene in the application of Godfrey Morse, of Boston, and other bondholders for the appointment of receivers for the Bay State Gas company. A number of other petitions for intervention were also pending. The court reserved its decision.

Latham Defeats Ashworth.

Philadelphia, Dec. 10.—Peter W. Latham, professional pugilist champion of the world, defeated Percy Ashworth, former amateur champion of England, in an exhibition match at the racquet club this afternoon. The match was for the best four out of seven games. Latham allowing Ashworth a handicap of seven aces in each game.

STORIES OF THE TOWN.

A Physician's Plight.

A dignified gentleman—a physician in the harvest time of his professional career—may be pardoned for fearing death—when it comes, of course, with its fleshless digit pointing directly at the disciple of Good Health. However, the physician has more death scenes to his credit than Hamlet ever suffered, metaphorically speaking. He knows death as we mortals know a rival in business. He knows its terrors, its ruthless power; he calls it as a foe, fights against fate and hammers at what his science taught him to believe are weak spots in the black demon.

But he has never been known to kill it. And it was this painful knowledge of his frailty which broke out in strokes on the head of a dignified local physician not a dozen days ago. The tragedy was enacted on a small bridge over the Lackawanna river, near the South end of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel company. The bridge was built for railroad traffic only and was particularly intended to move cars from the mill to the main track of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which at this point follows the west bank of the river. To do this the bridge was built at an angle across the river and the west end marks the beginning of an abrupt curve in the main track, the part north of the bridge having the appearance of a plain right straight across the bridge. The bridge was built from a distance seems to be a part of the main track.

Our dignified physician had occasion to use this bridge. With his little valise in his hands he nervously began the trip, stepping from tie to tie with the wretched water dancing under his very eyes.

He is six foot tall, built proportionately, and every bit of him quivered. A half hundred steps did he take and he stood in the middle of the bridge, when a heavy train, out of an engine's whistle made him stop and turn his head.

There, not 300 yards away, a fast passenger train was bearing down upon him.

Though himself he nervously began to think of his frailty. He got pale, did this dignified physician, he shook as the huge train came toward him; cold sweat trickled down his brow, his heart beat a quick tattoo, his fingers twitched on the handle of his little valise, and he gasped. He had never before in his experience seen such symptoms. He was a very sick man. With his eye he measured the remaining space to the other side of the bridge, and he looked back at the train. It was almost upon him.

But, as he looked, he found the secret satisfaction of seeing a man, all innocent of the impending doom, coming across the bridge.

"The fool!" thought the physician in his soul: "let him die; he deserves to die—unless he's dead already, poor fool; I'm going to take to the river!"

With that he dropped his grip and crawled to the edge of the bridge. He had one leg over when the all-innocent man behind him rushed up and exclaimed:

supper will be served each evening for twenty-five cents.

There will be services in the usual hour of the churches tomorrow at the usual hour, 10:30. In the evening a union temperance service will be held in the Methodist church. Rev. Dr. Kilgus, of Wilkes-Barre, will make the address. The public is most cordially invited.

O. Deaton, the contractor, is having the interior of his place of business renovated. He has had a new coat of paint put on the ceiling and the walls newly repaired.

The people of the town are delighted with the prospect now visible of having the swamp near the borough drained and this great menace to health eradicated.

The special services in the West Side chapel have been well attended this week and considerable interest has been manifested.

Several days ago the 12-year-old son of James Weaver suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. Mr. Weaver has as yet gained no knowledge of his whereabouts.

Professor J. T. Williams has accepted a position with a firm in Wilkes-Barre as bookkeeper.

Hony Gross, who was injured last Sunday by a fall while at work on the new pier of the Wyoming Central and Land company, is able to walk about the streets again.

A number of new students have enrolled in the night school. This is an excellent opportunity to receive a practical education and the young men of the town should take advantage of it.
