SECOND SERIES OF DEPOSITS.

Made Yesterday by the Children of No. 19 School.

The "School Savings Bank" of the school No. 19, of which Miss Josie D. Lees is principal, is a success. The second series of deposits was made yesterday at the morning session and the amount is half as much more than the first deposit. Yesterday's sum was $18.94. And in addition, more pennies were brought this time, which indicates that more depositors have decided to become shareholders in this institution and are going to save their pennies instead of spending them. The parents of the children have been inquiring into the purposes of the bank, and in every instance have accorded it their hearty approval and will second the efforts of Miss Lees, by fostering the idea of saving among their children.

Each teacher receives the deposits from the pupils in her room, and a credit slip is kept. The total amount for that room is then handed to the principal, together with the credits. The total amount for the whole number of depositors in the school is then deposited in the West Side bank. As fast as each pupil reaches the $1 mark then he or she becomes the proud possessor of a book, indicating that he or she is a depositor in the West Side bank, by way of the school. The pupil receives full credit for their personal amounts and it is always available to them, of course only in conformity with the rules of the West Side bank, governing this form of savings accounts.

YESTERDAY'S FUNERALS.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Paul Jones-Thomson was held yesterday afternoon from her residence, 319 North Hyde Park avenue. The many friends of the deceased were present to pay the last sad act of esteem and respect to one who had endeared herself to them during her life. Many floral tributes were strewn on or about the handsome black casket in which the remains lay. The volunteers of America, of which the deceased was a member, were present and assisted in the services. Rev. Thomas G. Grady, pastor of the Jackson Street Baptist church, preached the funeral sermon. At the conclusion of the services, the remains were borne to the Washburn street cemetery, accompanied by a large funeral cortege, and laid in final repose. The pallbearers were: John Barzle, James Harris, Thomas Davis, Thomas Boyan and Robert Jones.

The remains of Deloss E., the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Ashelman, of 322 Twelfth street, were interred at the brick church, at Durgess yesterday afternoon. Short services were held at the family home, at which many friends of the bereft parents were in attendance.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The members of the Columbia Chemical company, No. 5, met in regular session last evening in the company's quarters and elected officers for the ensuing year. Every member was present and the meeting proved a very interesting one in several particulars. There were several candidates for one or two officers, and as only one person could be elected each one was hustling to be the select one. The officers chosen were as follows: President, Charles Corless; vice president, William Lyman; recording secretary, William T. Barry; financial secretary, L. C. Barry; treasurer, A. B. Holmes; foreman, S. B. Price; first assistant foreman, William Lyman; second assistant foreman, Charles Holtry; first pipeman, Edward Patrick; second pipeman, T. E. Price; third pipeman, Henry Meyer; trustees, Charles Corless, Henry Kinsey and William Lyman. This is the fifth time that Charles Corless has been called upon to hold the highest office in the gift of the company. Being one of the charter members of the organization in 1877, he was then chosen for the first presidency. He is one of the oldest firemen still in active service, and is highly respected for his sterling worth and conservatism. In addition to the election of officers, other important matters were considered. The company is composed of an excellent set of men and beside recently acquiring the finest of apparatus, they will soon have an additional permanent man. An ordinance to this end is passing councils now. The present permanent man, George Meyers, will then become engineer.

FOR LIBRARY'S BENEFIT.

On Wednesday evening a musical and literary entertainment will be given in the Jackson Street Baptist church, which is for the purpose of raising funds wherewith to apply to the sustaining of the library. The library is now in the hands of the church. Those who enjoy good reading material themselves and are in sympathy with any movement of this kind which affords many who cannot buy reading matter to enjoy it, ought to assist this movement. The library is an exceptionally valuable one, containing as it does many rare works. These books have been acquired by gift and purchase during a period of years. The late Dr. Throop was one of the most liberal in donating. The current issues and daily papers are to be had at the reading desks and the courteous gentleman, D. C. Powell, who is in charge, is always ready to assist one in any manner towards getting any particular book you might wish. The gentlemen who have arranged for the entertainment are: Judge H. H. Edwards, James A. Evans, Benjamin Hughes, Alderman Moses and others, and they look for a generous response from the public.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Entertainment to begin at 7 o'clock.

Thomas Davies, of Edna avenue, employed as a painter, was painfully injured yesterday by falling from a ladder. The unfortunate man has been taken to Company H army hospital for the benefit of the widow of the late Thomas Williams was a successful affair. It was largely attended and the programme was excellent.

The Puritan Congregational church will conduct a fair and festival in Company H army hospital Wednesday. The entertainment of the affair is worthy of liberal patronage at the hands of the public.

H. J. Davenport, of Park Place, was given a hearing last evening by Alderman Bolteri on the charge of larceny by bailor, preferred by Mrs. Hattie Reed, also of the same neighborhood. The trouble originated over a horse which was being prosecuted to Davenport in consideration that he should feed the animal. For his troubles he was to have the use of the animal. Everything went well until two weeks had elapsed from the time the deal was consummated. In the meantime, Mrs. Reed stated that she had an offer to sell the horse, which would be profitable, and sent her son, so she alleges, to Davenport to get her property, but he was unable to get it as Mr. Davenport had sold the horse to Joseph Church in the sum of $1. The case in general was of a rather complicated nature and produced much laughter when the evidence was submitted to the alderman's consideration. Davenport gave bail in the sum of $50. Joseph Church qualified as bondsmen.

ELOQUENT LECTURE OF GENERAL GORDON

to encourage a long stay. He then said, impressively: "Twenty months later we made another visit, when the war was over, and we came back to our Father's house to stay forever, no longer with hostile banners waving in defiance, but to rally round the old flag, made redder and richer by common American blood."

He gave a comical description of his experience with a Pennsylvania Dutchman, whose favorite horse, "Worth more than all the money in the world," had been appropriated by the Confederate general. The "Heroine of the Susquehanna" he termed a "Union woman at Wrightsville, whose house his troops had saved from burning and who fed the soldiers the next day beneath their roof. His fathering officer was a southern sympathizer, because of her courtesy, intimidated as much. When surrounded by the army of the enemy she bravely cried: "Your men saved my home, but I am a Union woman, with husband and children in the Union cause, which I pray to God may triumph."

He honored her as he honored the southern women in their sacrifice and devotion. He found counterparts in both armies, for his own wife followed his fortunes throughout the war, hovering ever along the lines, often under fire, and suffering with him the privations of warfare.

The incident related of his own experience and that of Major General Francis C. Barlow, of New York, was interesting and humorous. Each believed the other dead. He had stood by the side of the dying Union officer on the field of Gettysburg and had taken his last message to the wife, foes though they were. Fifteen years later, at a dinner in Washington, they both met and were overwhelmed with the surprise, for Barlow had read the death of General Gordon's cousin of the same name and supposed it was the man who had befriended him when he lay dying, as it was thought, at Gettysburg. General Barlow died but a few months ago.

TRIBUTE TO MEADE.

A number of humorous incidents connected with the eccentric General Meade were told and then a chord of sympathy was struck when the speaker told a magnificent tribute to General Meade, of Pennsylvania. This noble soldier, who was military governor of Georgia after the Reconstruction Act, once at a dinner, when a northern lord refused to drink the proposed health of General Gordon, strange to his feet and cries: "I drink to General Gordon, once my enemy but now my friend."

A description of cessation of hostilities on the banks of the Rapidan was one of the most entertaining features of the lecture. The two armies were so close together that the pickets would not fire upon each other and much "swapping" of northern coffee and southern tobacco went on. General Gordon's own experience in putting a stop to these civilities was given with infinite humor. Nowhere else in modern or ancient warfare could such a condition have been possible.

So eloquent was the speaker's remarks that his beautiful tributes to Lee and Stonewall Jackson were received with equal raptures to the reverent and fitting references to Grant, Hancock and other Union officers. His dramatic portrayal of the last council of war by the lonely bivouac fire in the forest where Lee was surrounded by his broken followers the night before the surrender stirred his hearers' hearts and when the scene in the brick house was described with the great southern commander in his brilliant uniform—facing the Silent Man, in that pathetic act of the tragedy, profound feeling was evidenced.

It was a noble lecture from beginning to end, one that the youth of the land should hear, one that young and old are the better for hearing, and it is a pity that our high school and in fact the children of this city may not have the privilege of seeing one of the few great figures of our war history and listen to his impassioned words.

ARE DISPOSED TO SELL.

Congregational Meeting of the First Presbyterian Church Last Night.

At the meeting of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church, called last night to consider the advisability of selling the church property at this time, it was decided to leave the matter solely in the hands of the trustees. The trustees will take the matter up for immediate consideration and in a few days, likely, will give an answer to the parties represented by C. Parke Davidson, who desire an option on the property.

The disposition of the congregation and trustees favors the selling of the property and about the only matter to be considered now is the price that will be asked.

The meeting was presided over by E. P. Kingsbury, and F. E. Platt acted as secretary.
