Marquette Council Debaters Win from the Orators of Gen. Phil Sheridan Council.
 The first public debate in the North End in a long time was that of last evening in St. Mary's hall. The spacious auditorium was not large enough to accommodate the people who were anxious to partake of the hospitality of the Marquette council in affording them an opportunity to hear a question of rare interest discussed. John Mullein, a member of the council, acted as chairman, and in a brief and concise address paid a fitting tribute to Rev. J. J. O'Toole, who is the prime factor in all the council's praiseworthy undertakings.
 The debate was preceded by musical and literary selections, all of which were of a high standard.
 The debate was on the subject: "Resolved, That the Sunday Press should be abolished." The affirmative was represented by Messrs. Kelly, Mulhern and May, of Marquette council, and the negative by Messrs. Roche, Brown and Madden, of General Phil Sheridan council, of Green Ridge. Mr. May and Mr. Brown opened the argument for their respective sides. After a vigorous talk, in which each of the debaters was allowed fifteen minutes, their arguments were considered by the judges, Father McNally, of the West Side; John Jordan and Professor A. F. O'Boyle.
 During the intermission, Willie Lynott sang a solo in a pleasing manner and was compelled to respond to an encore. The judges had in the meantime agreed upon a decision.
 Father McNally was solicited by his colleagues to report their finding in the debate. After summing up the points, he stated that the judges had come to a unanimous agreement and awarded the fruits of victory to the Marquette debaters.

 Robert Elliot, who was apparently dying Sunday evening, yesterday gained sufficiently to give his family and friends renewed hopes. His condition varies.
