MID-SEASON WEDDING.
Miss Hannah Davis and John Harwood United Last Evening.

A quiet home wedding occurred at the residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Harwood, last evening, when Miss Hannah Davis, of Frink street, was united in marriage to John Harwood. The ceremony was performed in the prettily decorated parlor at 8 o'clock and Rev. Peter Roberts, of Olyphant, was the officiating clergyman. directly prompted by a theatrical representation of "Othello." It was the case of a young Italian who insured the life of his servant to his own benefit, and after waiting a couple of months smothered him in his bed one night. At his trial the criminal calmly remarked that he had lately seen (twice he actually went, probably with the object of perfecting his method) the scene "Othello," and that he "only did the same as what the Othello did to Desdemona," and he also confessed that in the very act of smothering his victim "the scene in the theatre was vividly before him as it was before him now." This is one case, at any rate, for Sir Henry Irving to ponder over.

OBITUARY.
Ellen C. widow of the late Selden T. Scranton, of Oxford, N. J., formerly of Scranton, died at noon yesterday at the old home homestead at Wyoming, Pa., from a sudden and violent attack of pneumonia. She was a native of a late William Henry, who was associated with Colonel George and Selden T. Scranton in the early development of this city. A sister, Mrs. Charles Scranton, of Oxford, N. J., and a brother, Reuben Henry, of Jersey City, survive her. A brief service will be held at the evening house at Wyoming, tomorrow at 10 a. m. There will be funeral services at Oxford, N. J., on Saturday and interment will be made at Bessemer, N. J. William Henry, Colonel George W. Scranton, Selden T. Scranton and Sanford Grant were the first original purchasers of the coal and iron properties which founded the city of Scranton. Mr. and Mrs. Selden T. Scranton moved here from Oxford, N. J., in 1841, and built and occupied the home where J. H. Bessemer now lives on Ridge town. She possessed a most loving Christian character and her hospitality knew no bounds. Her husband is remembered by her friends. She was the last of the original members of the First Presbyterian church of this city. Thomas Henry Atherton, of Wilkes-Barre, is a half brother, and Mrs. W. Scott Steyer, of Wyoming, a half sister of the deceased.

Stricken with paralysis while at work Monday morning, John W. Griffiths, of 1161 Egon street, never recovered from the stroke and last night about 9 o'clock succumbed. The deceased was about 46 years of age and came here from Wales several years ago. For some time he resided with an old friend, Evan Edwards, at Hampton street, and then married. His wife alone survives him. He was a quiet, home-loving man, but enjoyed with great interest his relations. His father was a sea captain and his five brothers are all sailors. The funeral services will be announced later.

Card From Fannie May Brockway, Editor of the Tribune.
Sir: The "girl from Hawley only 14 years of age" was not "conducted" to my house by a young man. She came alone and I did not come from Carlondale to look for a situation. The first I knew of her watch Mr. McHale had it and he found it on the stairs. Adorned with a diamond ring and a bracelet, it was not mine. I did not require me to furnish bail but issued a warrant for McHale. Please publish this in correction of reports in some of the Scranton papers.

Explaining a Mystery.
"Talking about warnings," said the doctor, "you would be surprised to know how many people believe in them in these enlightened days, and actually are guided in important affairs by some such absurdity as a clock striking thirteen, or a black spider running over a white cloth."
"How do you account for it, doctor?"
"The leaven of old Egypt. They inherit those fancies just as they take their hair and eyes from some remote ancestor. When you see a group of breathless children listening to some weird yarn told by an elder, just say to yourself, 'that will be folk-lore in the future!'"
"Have you ever met with any instances of those so-called warnings?"
"Yes, and seen the impression they make, and I must say there is something very impressive about an unusual happening at a deathbed or on a solemn occasion. I was called by a man die, and as I stood with his family about his bed, there came three distinct raps back of a large mirror in the room and instantly it was shivered to fragments. Naturally we were all startled. There is supposed to be some special significance in three raps, and the breaking of the mirror is popularly believed to mean sorrow to its possessor. The family at once accepted the event as a sure indication of death, and I was called in with grief, although they knew before that the case was hopeless."
"Did you discover how it happened?"
"Yes. I was alone in the room the next day when all was over. A white cloth covered the broken mirror, but on looking back of it I found that the point of a large nail which had been driven in the wall of the next room had penetrated through and cracked the glass. So the message of the three raps was really an accident, and not purely human agency. But I did not tell the family they seemed so settled in their conviction that it was a supernatural warning."—Detroit Free Press.

At ebb of tide, the wild sea leaves the shore;
That late his strong arms clasped the lonely bride,
And slowly as moans strew the somber strand
 At ebb of tide,
What is love's dalliance to his empire wide?
For from love's level lines of wind-erased sand,
His steaming cohorts toss white plumes in pride.
Amid the chill haze on the shore I stand
The storm-bird's cry above and—at my side,
A dream—'I turn—then falls an empty hand.
