

Social and PERSONAL

Scranton always makes an effort to give itself and its friends a good time on the holiday season, but this time it has surpassed all its old records. The only evening this week on which society made even a pretense of taking a rest was Wednesday evening, when it was supposed to go to prayer meeting.

Mrs. N. Y. Leet will give an informal tea this afternoon, which will be attended by a large number of young people.

Mrs. Kierstedt and Miss Kierstedt gave a reception yesterday afternoon at their home on Webster avenue in honor of Mrs. Hiss and Mrs. Hudson, of New York. They will also receive on Monday afternoon.

The Country club "bus" will make its trips today, and between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock will make half-hour trips to accommodate those who attend Mrs. Warren's tea.

Colonel Boies gave a luncheon at the Scranton club Thursday in honor of the guests entertained at his home.

Mrs. William Connell will give an at home on Wednesday of the next week.

Miss Ruth Hanley gave a thimble tea yesterday afternoon.

Harold Watres entertained a number of Princeton friends at dinner Thursday evening.

Mrs. Everett Warren will give a tea this afternoon at the Country club. Later Mr. and Mrs. Warren will entertain at dinner.

The Scranton Bicycle club held a dance for members and friends last night. Lawrence furnished the music. Among the out-of-town people were: Miss Lucy, Miss Polen, Miss Sloane, of Pittston; Miss Kries, Miss Reel, Philadelphia; Messrs. Vanderpool, Sicker, Durant, of Wilkes-Barre; Mr. Shaffer, of Belmont.

Mrs. George B. Hand gave a tea Wednesday in honor of her eldest daughter, Miss Annie, at her home on Jefferson avenue. Miss Katharine Goodale, of Watertown, N. Y., assisted Mrs. and Miss Hand in receiving.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McAnulty gave a dancing party for their daughter, Miss Anna McAnulty, Thursday night, at their home, corner of Vine street and Clay avenue. It was a most enjoyable event.

"The Spinster" dance at the Scranton Bicycle club, Thursday night, was a very elaborate affair. About 125 persons, about a score from out of town, were present. Prominently concerned in the direction of the function were: Miss Edith Jones, Miss Julia Pettibone, Miss Porrey, Miss Hattie Freas and the Misses Rose.

The receptions given Thursday afternoon and evening by Colonel and Mrs. H. M. Boies, at their home, introducing their daughter, Miss Ethel, were probably the most elegant ever attempted in this city's social history. Every detail was in keeping with the magnificence of their home. In the afternoon a reception was held and in the evening a dance was given. Colonel and Mrs. Boies and Mrs. Thomas Dickson and Miss Boies received.

The numerous friends of the young attorney will doubtless be surprised to learn of his contemplated change. Since being admitted to the Luzerne bar Mr. Loughran has figured prominently in his profession, and he held in high esteem by his associates. He has always taken interest in local affairs and while his friends will regret his departure, all appreciate his ambitious change. Since being admitted to the Luzerne bar Mr. Loughran has figured prominently in his profession, and he held in high esteem by his associates.

WONG LING AH GAVE A FEAST.

Boston's Americanized Chinaman Introduces His Bride.

From the Boston Herald.

Wong Ling Ah was married in Montreal two weeks ago. He went there to await the arrival of his bride from China. The knot was tied, but it was not until yesterday that the festivities began in Boston. Then Wong Ling Ah had a big dinner in all the restaurants, and he, with members of his family, received the guests with smiles and bows and handshakes. That is, each man shook his own hands as he bowed.

The groom is an Americanized Chinaman. He wears American clothes, and has done so for many years. He does not like to dress in the flowing gowns of China. He was a happy man yesterday and had a good time.

He spent nearly all day at his new home, 21 Oxford street, and there he called on his friends and gave the blushing bride, late in the evening, when the merriment was at its height, there was an explosion of fire.

but Wong Ling Ah did not awake the neighborhood as Chinamen are wont to do when they have fun.

The great time was in the restaurant, where the feast was open to the friends of Wong Ling Ah about 5 o'clock. The tables were laid out with white cloths, and the daintiest dishes were prepared. In the big Oriental restaurant, where covers were laid for 100 Chinamen, elaborate preparations had been made, and the chopsticks and spoons were brought out on state occasions, were beside each plate. There were all sorts of choice Chinese dishes, and that pigeons played a prominent part in the feast will be readily understood when it is known that there were over 100 live pigeons in the restaurant Tuesday evening.

Wong Ling Ah left his home on Oxford street a little before 5 o'clock. He was accompanied by his brother, and they were dressed alike. Both wore loose coats of dark red, which came to about the knees. Under this they had white shirts, white stockings, full at the ankles. The hats were of black silk, of the shape you see on tea caddies, the crown being of red.

In Wong Ling Ah's party were two young cousins. These were dressed in long blue costumes which almost hid their white stockings. They also wore tiny hats, and the sleeves of their jackets were so long that they had to be turned up at the wrists so that they could carry their fans.

These four made a tour of the restaurants, walking the streets in single file, while the people wondered. Wong Ling Ah, with a happy smile, and by the time the guests began to come around he was in a handshaking mood. The party of four lined up before the door of the restaurant and there received the guests. There was lots of bowing, but the George Francis Train style was adopted, and there was no shaking hands.

As a guest appeared Wong Ling Ah and his party bowed low, each man clapping his own hands and shaking them vigorously. Then there was a chatter of Chinese congratulations. This was kept up until all the tables were cleared, and the main programme was carried out in each restaurant.

The dinner was a long one, and there was rice wine in plenty. The guests ate and then they left to their beds out. Then they left the restaurants in small parties, walked around the block, or stood at the corners for a time. Then they went back and ate again.

When the dinner was about half over Wong Ling Ah made another tour of the restaurants, and the guests drank his health. After the dinner there was another reception at the house on Oxford street. The guests were introduced to the bride, and she blushed behind her fan. Some of the Chinamen tried to steal the fan, and when they succeeded the bride had to give a souvenir before she could get it back. The presents were numerous and costly, in all that stereotyped phrase implies.

Wong Ling Ah showed them to her friends.

Wong Ling Ah, an aged relative of the groom, was the big man of the occasion. If the ceremony had taken place in China Wong Yick would have had great responsibility on his shoulders. As it was, he had to Americanize a good deal. It was Wong Yick who placed the hat on Wong Ling Ah's head, and that means a great deal.

THE BICYCLE NOSE.

From the British Medical Journal.

As a considerable majority of the patients who have lately consulted me for nasal trouble have complained that the sensation of obstruction has either commenced or considerably increased since they have taken to the bicycle, the question arises: Are we to place this phenomenon healthy and almost necessary mode of locomotion among the causes of nasal mischief? It is quite conceivable that the quick rush through the air, inhaling large quantities of dust on the country roads, and all sorts and conditions of dirt on the London ones, might cause considerable irritation to the nasal mucous membrane.

Her Advice.

"You were sitting up with a sick friend last night, were you not, dear?" she said gently.

"Yes, yes," I said. "I don't know much about medicine, but if I had a sick friend whose doctor prescribed cigars and poker chips I'd advise him to change his physician at once."

He looked that way.

"Yes, I married that man, and he's a doctor."

"Did you? Then you must be a big-souled fellow."
