GRANT HERRING'S SUCCESSOR.

Ex-Representative Leonard Seem to Be Sifted For the Place.

A Washington special to the Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette says: In the course of the next few days Senator Quay will call upon Secretary Gage and President McKinley and recommend the appointment of ex-Representative Leonard, of Potter county, to succeed Grant Herring as collector of internal revenue for the Twelfth district. Mr. Herring's term expires on the 25th instant. Mr. Leonard was here tonight and had a conference with the senator.

Regarding the successor to Marshal Walker for western Pennsylvania, the senator said that he had not decided who he would recommend. He thought the case did not rest with him. He informed that Mr. Walker's term expires on the 15th instant, the senator said that he would confer with Senator Penrose and endeavor to reach a decision.

THEY STRUCK A TARTAR.

Daniel Murray Gave a Section of the Police Force a Very Exciting Night's Work.

Daniel Murray bothered half of the police in the central police precinct last night. Actually seven patrolmen and a citizen used their influence in properly landing Murray behind the bars.

His assault of Patrolman Sartor resulted in a clubbing which later on found Murray at the Lackawanna hospital, and on the way back to the police station the prisoner, fresh from the physician's care as he was, broke away from two policemen and was captured by a third three blocks ahead.

Murray's like has never been encountered in police history. He is six foot tall, of big build and vicious. Last night, to add to these conditions, Murray was intoxicated. He and a friend were moved from the corner of Washington avenue and Lackawanna avenue by Patrolman Johler. The two men, it seems, went down Washington avenue and at the point where the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western tracks cross the road they met Patrolman Sartor and Schindler standing on the track Murray at first mock-d at an approaching train. He jumped out of the way with only a few feet to spare.

After this Patrolman Sartor accosted Murray and told him to move on, Murray said he wouldn't and he'd like to see any "copper" handle him. Patrolman Sartor accepted the challenge and laid hold of Murray. The policeman was hurled to the road and the beer driver sprang at him and was clutching Sartor's throat when Patrolman Schmidt, standing on the track, dealt Murray a blow on the head.

The infuriated man struggled but was over-powered and handcuffed. Patrolman Sartor, who is several sizes smaller than his prisoner, again took Murray in tow, started toward the police station, Patrolman Schmidt taking charge of Murray's companion. Only a short distance had been covered when Murray again caught his captor and threw him to the ground.

Patrolman Sartor swung his club viciously, but nothing seemed to subdue the big fellow.

Patrolman Schmidt, who was walking in the rear with Murray's companion, again rushed up and pulled Murray away. The same thing occurred again before the station house was reached. Patrolman Sartor this time calling upon a colored man to assist.

When Murray was taken into the sergeant's office his face and clothing were smeared and soaked with his own blood. It was quite ridiculous to take him to the Lackawanna hospital. Patrolmen George Jones and Schmidt took Murray to the hospital.

When the man was under the physician's care he fainted dead away from the effects of the drink on his blood. He was resuscitated and sent back to the police station in the care this time of Patrolmen Jones and Bloch. The fresh air must have revived him for he made one big break for liberty which was successfully resisted.

The two policemen followed. Patrolman Bloch discharging two revolver shots in the air. Patrolman Peuster heard the shots and from Penn avenue saw the big fellow running through the alley with the policemen behind him.

Murray stumbled, fell, and was pounced upon by Patrolman Peuster. The three policemen then took him to the station house and locked the cell doors on him. Murray's companion was also arrested.

The two will be given a hearing this morning. Murray is employed in a South Side brewery.

THEIR SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Levi Entertain Friends at Their Home.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Levi celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding last night at their beautiful home, 823 Madison avenue. A very delightful evening was passed. Mr. and Mrs. Levi received their guests in the east parlor, which was prettily decorated with palms and flowers.
