many respects, the most elegant afternoon receptions ever seen in Scranton, was that given at the home of Congressman and Mrs. William Connell yesterday. The house, always beautiful, has recently undergone extensive al terations and improvements, that make it one of the most magnificent resitences in this region. The rooms yeswday presented a vision of loveliness prevailing color of the floral dec tions was pink. Musses of pink ros s filled every available space. The mantels were hidden beneath the delicate foliage of maiden hair fern, while palms and tropical plants were banked in fire places and alcoves. In a bower of green in the music room Bauer's orchestra was placed. The dining room, which is one of the handsomest in the city, with its rich muhegany paneling on walls and ceiling, and its luxurious accessories, was exquisite in the scheme of decorations. The table bore a centre piece of pink roses, and silver andelabra with pink shades. Cut glass

TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES,

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles," with Minnte Maddern Fiske in the title role, had its first Scranton presentation at the Lyceum last night. The drama is a Lyceum last night. The drama is a somewhat free dramatization of Thomas Hardy's novel of the same name, which, during the last few years has been al-ternately praised as the acme of realism at its best, and condemned as a most pernicious piece of literature. Whatever may be the opinion of critics concern-ing the novel, there is no gainsaying that Lorimer Stoddard has most delicate ly adapted it to the needs of the stage. He has preserved the vital, dramatic incidents of the story, and presented them great vividness and skilfullness. Fiske was the living, breathing. thoroughly human being, the brain of the novelist gave to literature. In her physi-cal aspect she is not the Tess of Thom-as Hardy, but in her power to realize the complex nature and feel the woes and emotions that swayed the unhappy English girl. Mrs. Fiske is truly the Tess of the novelist. From her the heart-affecting sorrow of the story receives a lew and impressive meaning. The story deals with the individual life, unhappily and unfortunately situated, and relent-lessly conducted to a fatal issue. She makes this hard, unlovely life an appeal for a broader sympathy and more hu-manity in dealing with the weak and erring. She holds up for abhorance the social conditions which punish with a misery worse than death the lapses of an erring sister and readily forgive the same offenses in her strong, self-reliant broth-

It was the novelist and dramatist who shaped the stage production and im-planted the moral in it, but without a Mrs. Fiske to interpret it, the drama would be a problem play of an ordinary character. It is her womanliness, and the intense realism of her every word and gesture that rescues "Tess of the D'Ur-bervilles," from the ordinary, and makes t at once the most tense and fascinating of recent dramatic offerings.

Mrs. Fiske does not belong to the conventional school of actress. She has stud-ied nature and simulates the real wonderfully well. The first strong scene is in the second act, where she confesses her wrong-doing to the man she mar-ried a few hours before. It is a recital not easily banished from the mind, yet wholly devoid of theatrical clap-trap.

Again in the last act when she is living with Alec D'Urberville and the utter weariness of life has overtaken her, her distress is manifest in every look and word, and even her carriage is ele-quent of the fact that life stretches in a hopeless, uninviting vista before her. Then the husband she thought dead reappears and a dumb horror selzes her. It is minutes before she can speak, and then her voice is hoarse and strange. It is not the voice of Tess, but of a strange creature that woe and deceit have converted her into. Her husband leaves her again, and her lover's bitter sarcastic laugh assails her ear. Tha laugh seals his doom. It is retribution That possibly exact justice, but it is terrible to contemplate. When Tess emerges from the room of the man she sold herself to, it needs not the blood-stained knife to tell the deed she has done; it is told in the hoarse breathing and the almost total physical collapse that has fol-lowed. It was a true climax to the pre-ceding efforts of the actress.

Mrs. Fiske's support was worthy of her. Forest Robinson was Angel Clare; Frederick De Belleville. Alec Stoke-D'Urberville; John Jack. John Durbeyfield; Mary E. Baker, Joan Durbeyfield, and Mary Shaw, Marion. The reception of the star was very cordial by the large audience that saw the play. She was twice compelled to come before the cur-tain to acknowledge the applause of the

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH

Councils Will Be Asked to Provide for Another Sanitary Officer.

THE CUMBERLAND HOSE HOUSE

Made the Subject of a Special Report by Health Officer Allen .- Dr. Bently Says There is No Politics in and made arrangements for the contne Matter So Far as the Board is Concerned . - Annual Report of Food and Milk Inspector Cullen.

The board of health held its meeting last evening in the city hall. Reports of the several departments were made by their respective officers and on motion the board decided to meet next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock to prepare an estimate for the present years' expenses.

One of the items in the forthcoming estimate will be for the employment of an officer to assist Sanitary Officer W. H. Burke in his work. This will be nsequent to the suggestion made by Health Officer W. E. Allen, at the meeting last night,

The board also discussed the Cumberland hose house matter. Secretary R. J. Murray, it will be remembered. sent a communication to councils threatening, that if the hose house, located on Market street, North Scranton, was not renovated, the board would authorize its officer to demolish the building."

Councils sent back Secretary Murray's letter, simply "referring it to the board of health." Meanwhile Health Officer Allen had inspected the premises of the hose house. The result of the inspection is made known in Health

HEALTH OFFICER'S REPORT.

Scranton, Jan. 3, 1888, Members of the Board of Health. Gentlemen: The reports of the secre-tary and of the sanitary officer for the past month indicate a very satisfactory state of affairs, as much so as could pos-sibly be expected under present condi-tions. According to instructions from the board I inspected the Cumberiand hose house on West Market street and found the building clean and of itself in fair sanitary state. The house is cheap structure, having a room for the hose carriage on the first floor and one bove, or upstairs, for the men. stable opens directly into the carriage room and the manure is piled up at the The drainage from the west percolates rear of the stable. the side hill on the west percolates through the manure heap and runs under the floor through an open drain and is discharged into the gutter a short dis-tance below. As a matter of course there is a strong smell of stabe ammonia throughout the whole structure, which cannot be very wholesome and surely is anything but agreeable. The horse may be able to stand it, and the hose cart may not weaken, but I do not think men should be asked to inhale such odors for any length of time.

The only remedy for this would be to have the stable further away and a sewer olpe put through the lot. In the early spring the kept over and rozen garbage wilt be painfully in evidence and I think it would be well if the board would give the matter attention, and, if possible, devise some better means than we have now for collecting it. I went to Lakewood, N. J., during last month to hear Mr. Rudolph Herring address the "State Sanitary Association of New Jersey" on the subject of garbage, but ony learned that in some cities garbage was burned and in others destroyed chemically, and both were good. I trav-eled around New York with Mr. Dunning and saw how to save waste paper and old shoes, but I did not find out how we are going to collect our garbage. It becomes more apparent every month that an inspector of plumbing is greatly needed. If the appropriation for the board of health could be slightly increased so that a man might be hired to placard houses, watch funerals and properly fumigate all infected premises a imount of good would, I am sure, be ec

(Signed) W. E. Allen, Health Officer, OTHER THINGS DISCUSSED.

Afterward Health Officer Allen disussed in detail the matters mentioned in his report. The address of Mr. Herring on "Garbage" he pronounced a disappointment. Nothing had been gained of value to the board. employment of an assistant to Sanitary Officer Burke he thought was imperative. In regard to the Cumberland Hose house, Dr. J. K. Bently, who presided, suggested the idea that the matter was not one of politics, as councils take it. "The board of health has nothing to do with politics." said Dr.

"I have heard that the company is maintained in the quarters because of the owner of the building who receives rental from the city." It was decided to instruct the health officers to confer with the chief of the fire department, with a view of improving the quarters. The matter of an extra sanitary officer will be discussed at the meeting Saturday afternoon. Sanitary Officer Burke reported the candy store kept by John R. Kelley, on Third street, Dodgetown, where the children of the house are afflicted with a terrible disease. The case was noticed in The Tribune last week.

The sanitary officer was instructed to act as the case demanded. The and also for ward assessor and assessor candy will be confiscated. The annual report of Milk and Food Inspector T. N. Cullen was as follows: Stores and markets visited, 6,835; confiscated, beef, 1,581 pounds; pork, 629 pounds; mut-ton, 248 pounds; veal, 890 pounds; sausage, 195 pounds; poultry, 1,656 pounds; fish, 8,928 pounds; spare ribs, 280 pounds

FOOD INSPECTOR'S COMMENT. Inspector Cullen accompanied his report with the following remarks:

I take pleasure in certifying to the inreasing sentiment of dealers in perishable goods and to abide by the senitary regulations prescribed by the board. There were few cases during the year in which I was not treated with the ut-most courtesy. I desire also to thank the mayor, members of the board, and officers, for extending to me every encouragement and aid in the performance of my duties.

I cannot too strongly impress upon the board the importance of the appointment of a city chemist as soon as the finances of the city will permit. We have excel-lent devices for determining the specific gravity and the percentage of butter fat in milk, but no devise can determine the actual quality of milk. A chemical an-alysis is the only sure test, and there should be no doubt about the purity of an article so generally used as food Sanitary Officer Burke's report for the year showed that he made 309 tours of inspection. The yards found unsanitary numbered 420. The condition of the alleys and streets was attributed to the absence of grade. D. D. Thomas,
