EVE KNOCKED OUT.

John Lewis, of Simpson, who claims to be a much abused man, has had a warrant sworn out for Christmas Davis, who runs a hotel on Belmont street, charging him with assault and battery. Lewis claims that he received the battering on the night of Jan. 3 in a public house in the neighborhood of the silk mill and has since then been confined to the house by his injuries. He says that in addition to the general severe treatment he received his eve has been knocked out.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

An exceedingly pretty home wedding took place Wednesday evening, when Miss Rose Setta Peters was united in marriage to Alfred T. Thompson. The ceremony took place at the home. the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Peters, of Wayne street. The parlor was prettily decorated with palms and potted plants in profusion, and a large frame arch under which the marriage was solemnized. At § o'clock the bride and groom marched into the parlor from an ante-room to the strain of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Professor Firth. Under the arch the couple were made one by the Rev. Correct Breathing.

It has been discovered that the double thin can be banished by correct breath-ing. The woman with a short neck must hold her head high, even stretching her aeck until conscious of the tension of the cords. She should also practice dropping her head and letting it roll listlessly about. The Art of Faking a Bath Properly.

Bathing is a very important daily duty ret few people know how to take a bath to get the most good out of it. There are certain things that add to the comfort of a bath which should not be missing from a well appointed bathroom. Every tathroom should have a cork or rubber mat placed beside the tub. Woolen mats ibsorb moisture and become dingy and unhygienic.

Every bathroom should have attached to the wall beside the tub, low enough to be accessible, some small wire trays; one to hold the sponge and another the would be in operation by March 1. Kipling and Stockton.

Rudyard Kipling and Frank R. Stockton met each other at a reception some time ago. The latter informed the fa-mous Englishman that he seriously contemplated a visit to India.

"I'm glad to hear it," exclaimed Kip-ling enthusiastically.

"You see," he went on, "I know just what we'll do with you over there when we get you away from your friends and we get you away from your friends and family. We'll lure you on into the jun-gie and have you seized and bound by our trusty wallahs. We'll have you turned over on your back and get one of our biggest elephants to stand over you with its forefoot poised above your head. Then I'll say in my most insignat. head. A Deserted Bride.

A few evenings since a small party of oung gentlemen and ladies met at the Central depot to welcome home from their wedding trip a couple who vere expected on the train from Chicago. The train was on time. Imagine the sur-prise when the bride came marching along the platform loaded with bags and bundles almost beyond her capacity to handle. The groom was not in sight and to make matters worse, the pretty bride was sobbing when her friends her,

"Why, great heavens, Clara, what's the maiter? Surely, Charley isn't dead or sick, is he?" asked one. "Oh, I don't know where he is," she said. "He went out of the sleeper at Indianapolis and never came back. I'm afraid he has met with foul play of some kind, or that he fell off the cars." "But what did he go out for?" was the next question, "Well, you see, I wanted a cup of tea, and Charley said we had plenty of time, and that he would go and get it, and he never came back. Oh, I've had an awful time all the way here. You don't think he's hurt, do you? she said to her sister. "Of course not, goosey. Don't you see? He went out and missed the train, that is all there is about it. He will be along on the next train." "Oh, if I thought so I would just sit here and wait until the train comes in. Can I dispatch to him?"

had never been in such a pince in the was was able to persuade him that this was not the destination she wished.-Ex-way here, and you will go right out, home and wait for him."

Charley showed up in due time and explained matters. He got the cup of tea all right, and when he went to beard his train he got on one that was just starting for Chicago, and when he discovered his mistake the train was going too fast for him to escape. There was naught to do but to go until he could exchange trains, which he did. He arrived in Cin-chanati about twelve hours late, but the welcome he received from his young and welcome he received from his young and pretty wife convinced him that he was beloved much more than the average run of young husbands .-- Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune
