Never before, perhaps, has Wizard Edison's poetry of music and motion. by mechanical effects, more vividly been portrayed than last evening in Mears' hall, when Prof. Pearce gave one of his delightful entertainments to a crowded house. The entertainment was under the auspices of several of the classes of the Washburn Street Presbyterian church Sunday school. Mears' hall was crowded and standing room was at a premium. The moving pictures were realistic to a remarkable degree, and the instrumental and vocal selections of the phonograph were greatly enjoyed.

One of the leading features of the entertainment was the violin solos of Prof. F. Vandeweken, late of Brussels, accompanied by Miss Carr, of Scran- interesting. An excellent programme ton. His selections were masterpieces and exquisitely rendered, notably "Lenoia," a polanaise, and "Love's A neat sum was realized which will be devoted to liquidating the debt of the church, and we understand Prof. Pearce has been requested to repeat his delightful entertainment at an early date.

ine Ketty Laid at Rest in Hyde Park Catholic Cemetery -- Bob Sled Overturned at West Market Street and North Main Avenue -- Minor News

The second of the series of debates which has been arranged by Marquette council, Young Men's Institute, took place last evening in St. Mary's hall. The inclement weather had no terrors for the immense throng which gathered in the large hall and the interest manifested by the audience emphasized the fact that the debaters are rapidly gaining a warm place in the hearts of the people of this locality. The contending councils last evening were St. Brenden's, of the West Side, and Marquette council, of this place, and they ook as the question to be debated, Resolved, That a monarchy is more stable and substantial form of government than a republic."

The affirmative was represented by John E. Moran, Richard Shovelin and William Lynott, of Marquette council, and the welfare of the negative was looked after by Gus Duffy, Frank Mc-Lain and Thomas McLain, of the visting council. Joseph Evans, who acted as chairman, introduced the speakers, and after a lengthy and exhaustive view of the question at issue, the different points were submitted to the attention of the judges who were Rev. D. J. MacGoldrick, Enos Flynn and P. J. Ruane. During the interim a fine rogramme was rendered and particlated in by William Lynott, Charles Connolly and Miss Margaret Thornton. The judges in the meantime had arrived at a decision, which was made known by Father MacGoldrick. After somewhat detailed criticism he de clared the debate a draw.

It Will Be Heard Betore Judge Purdy

Judge Purdy, of Honesdale, will come here today to specially preside in the equity case of Joseph Fellows against Cornelius and J. Stanley Smith, which was continued from a previous session of equity court because of Judge Purdy's inability to give it the time required, just then.

The case was set down for yesterday, out Judge Purdy was detained at home and telegraphed that he could not ome until today. A one-fourth part of a sixty-one acre tract of land in Keyser Valley is the matter at issue. Fellows deeded the portion in question to Cornelius Smith's son in consideration of legal services that were to be performed by the father. Smith tired of the bargain and announced to Fellows, so it is alleged that the agreement was no longer in force and that deed for the land would be destroyed. Fellows afterwards discovered that the deed was put on record and hence the suit.

Several years ago a building and lean association known as the Meadow Brook association, was organized in South Scranton by some of its most progressive citizens. Last November, after a run of a little over nine years, the affairs of the association wound up as directed by the by-laws. All shares were paid in full. It was decided to re-organize under the old name and take new shares. Officers were elected and the association is ready for business. The officers elected are: S. S. Spruks,

The dog had wandered into the lot and seized the boy as he ran past him. Dr. Kolb was summoned and Coroner S. P. Longstreet was notified cauterized the wound.
