

CARBONDALE.

The Carbondale correspondence of the Tribune has been placed in the hands of Mr. C. R. Munn, Salem avenue and Church street, to whom news items may be addressed. All complaints as to irregular delivery, etc., should be made to W. J. Roberts, news agent.

DWELLING BURNED.

House of Daniel Hodgins, Totally Destroyed by Fire. The dwelling of Daniel Hodgins, of New Cemetery street, was totally destroyed by fire last night at 10 o'clock. The general alarm sounded at 11:30 p. m. and the Mitchell Hose company responded promptly. They ran short of hose and found the fire hydrant frozen. While they were after more hose the ice was thawed. With the second lot of hose they enabled to reach within 150 feet of the burning building, but owing to the altitude the water force was insufficient to reach the blaze. About five minutes later the Columbus came upon the scene with still more hose and a stream was soon playing on the flames, but there was nothing left to save. The city fathers should now see the necessity of buying a team for the Columbus who were obliged to go to a livery. Had they reached the fire as soon as the Mitchells the building could have been saved and the damage would have been very slight.

The fire originated from a defective stove pipe. The household effects were carried out. There is no insurance. Mr. Hodgins has been pursued by bad luck all his days. He has buried two wives, had a great deal of sickness in his family, suffered the loss of several fingers and a badly burned face in a mine explosion and for the past three years has been totally blind.

SCHOOL AFFAIRS.

Director-elect Hughes is Conservative—Dead Timber. Those who are expecting Director-elect P. F. Hughes to create a great stir when he becomes seated on the school board will be disappointed. Mr. Hughes is not on the radical order. In fact, he is inclined to conservatism and instead of attempting any general overturning, it is believed by those who know him best that he will quietly and thoroughly study the situation and effect such reforms as he may have in mind by bringing the other members into harmony with him.

Yes, there is need of reform. The school system is not more perfect than other systems of government and there is plenty of opportunity for each of the ambitious young directors-elect to distinguish himself and serve the community well. It is a well-known fact that there are some useless appendages among the intellectual lights that are paid to illuminate the minds of our youth. There are lights, incandescent, gas and candles. Some of the candles, whether they be old or young, should be forced into other vocations. There would be some gain in pensioning them.

GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Berean Baptist Church Will Commemorate Anniversary on Feb. 27. The Berean Baptist church of this city will commence the celebration of its golden jubilee on the twenty-seventh inst. A programme is in course of preparation which will require four days to carry out. Many interesting details of history will be brought out in connection with the commemoration of the church's birth which occurred half a century ago.

Having rounded up such a long period with gratifying accomplishments, the pastor and people feel like making this a grand and colorful occasion and it will doubtless long be remembered as one of the greatest events in the organization's history. The programme will be made public some time next week.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Miss Jennie Chumard pleasantly entertained a number of friends at a progressive euchre party Wednesday evening, at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. L. Patterson, 61 Lincoln avenue. Refreshments were served and the very enjoyable time had. Those present were the Messrs. and Mesdames H. O. Warrus, R. H. Reynolds, Frank Hubbard, A. L. Patterson, the Misses Lou Williams, Lizzie Scurry, Mabel Carr, Ada, Alice and Della Chumard, Miss Humphrey, of Boston, Mass., and Miss Ida Barnes, of Herrick Centre; Messrs. D. L. Crane, Dr. W. A. Spencer, H. G. Williams, H. G. Lkeley, G. M. Patterson, Harry and Edward Carr, and Mr. Humphrey, of Boston, Mass.

MR. WILLIAMS ELECTED.

The statement appearing in both the local papers that G. W. Norris was elected to the common council from the sixth ward was erroneous. It was due to a mistake in transcribing the returns, in which his name was added to the vote of Mr. Nor is. The true standing of the candidates was given in the detailed vote by districts in The Tribune. The ward will be represented by Harry Williams and Leonard Campbell, two staunch young Republicans.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Walter H. Wilson, of this city, through attorney Louis Gramer, filed an application for divorce from his wife, Josie Wilson, who deserted him, he alleges, July 18, 1895, after they had been married five years. The ladies of the Second Presbyterian church are preparing for a supper and entertainment to be given on Doctors now agree that consumption is curable. Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced. The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites. To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

the evening of Washington's birthday, Feb. 22. Court Livy, Foresters of America, will attend the Methodist church in a body Sunday evening. Mrs. N. F. Hiller and son are visiting in the metropolis. Mr. Alice Crapo, of Salem avenue, left yesterday for a visit with friends in New York city. Before returning home she will visit her son, Moore, who is a student at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Harry Dennis, of Wyoming street, is entering her niece, Miss Edith Dennis, of Green Ridge. Miss Mary Brees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Brees, of Tenth avenue, and George Seidler, of New Cemetery street, were married at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage by Rev. G. H. Place, Ph. D., Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. They will reside with the bride's parents.

In St. Rose church at half-past five Wednesday evening, Miss Jennie Walsh, daughter of Mrs. Bridget Swartz, of Pike street, and Anthony Walsh, of Dundas street, took the vows that united them in marriage. Rev. T. F. Coffey was the officiating clergyman. Miss Kathryn V. Kennedy, of South Main street, attended the bride, and the groom's best man was Charles Toole, of the West Side. William Angier, of Wyoming street, is in Honoluleu, where he was called by the death of his aged mother.

TAYLOR NEWS.

The Price Library Special Meeting. Coming Bazaar—Other News of Interest. The meeting of the Price Library association on Friday evening is open to all. The pastors, merchants, young men and also ladies and all who do not mind to see the members closed are most cordially invited to attend. One of the directors yesterday said: "We don't like to close the rooms but we must do it if the public of Taylor won't support us or become members of the association. We had no one at the meeting and we appeal to you to attend the meeting and assist the faithful dozen to keep open the rooms." The meeting this evening will be called at 8 o'clock.

The young people of the Primitive Methodist church of the Archbold, are making preparations for their coming bazaar which will be held at the church on Washington's birthday. A supper will also be served. Tickets are selling rapidly. Martin Luther lodge, No. 22, Loyal Knights of America, will meet this evening at Reese's hall. Mrs. Walter Edwards, of Hyde Park, was the guest of relatives in this place yesterday. John Lenahan, who has been visiting his parents in the Archbold, has returned to his home in Philadelphia. He was accompanied by his brother, Dennis.

The Taylor Choral union will meet for rehearsal this evening at the Calvary Baptist church. Every singer in the borough is requested to be present. The choir will be met on Tuesday, Feb. 23, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. John E. Evans, who has returned home from Waunery after visiting relatives. The employees of the Jernyn and Greenwood collieries will receive their monthly distributions for January tomorrow.

The first annual masquerade ball, held under the auspices of the American Social club at Weber's rink last evening was a success, both socially and financially. The carpenters employed at the new wooden mill are making rapid progress in their work and is nearing completion. John Gibbons, of the Archbold, has returned from New York, where he has been spending the past week. John Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Lloyd, who met with a serious accident at the Archbold mines last week, is getting along nicely since the amputation of his left arm. The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allen, of Main street, died on Wednesday. It will be buried this afternoon. Funeral private.

OLD FORGE. Mr. David Beynon and family, of Providence, spent Sunday at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. M. J. Patterson, of Brookline, Pa., is visiting at the home of Mr. E. Drake. Mr. Thomas Mulr will move his family into Mr. William Tinkler's house. Thomas Ward, of Hunlock's Creek, is visiting in this place this week. Don't forget the automobile show by the Alonzo Hatch company tomorrow evening in the high school auditorium under the auspices of the Young Men's Bible class of the new church.

All the students of the Epworth league convention on Tuesday were highly pleased with the essays and addresses of both afternoon and evening. A number of solos were rendered during the sessions and enjoyed by all. The following is the result of the election held in the place on Tuesday: School directors, Andrew Kennedy, Robert Johnson; supervisors, William White, Michael Joyce; treasurer, William Kohler; assessor, John S. Clark; auditor, Edward R. Jones; town clerk, William Burgess. The Lawrence Literary society of the Lawrence Congregational church will hold its monthly meeting, Feb. 22, '98. The programme will be as follows: Soprano, "In the Secret of His Presence;" Gospel Hymns 5 and 6; for girls not over 17, prize $1.00; recitation, Eccles. xii:7; for boys not over 15, prize $1.00; recitation, "The Harbor Bell;" Gospel Hymns 5 and 6; recitation, Matthew, xi:29-30; girls not over 15, prize $1.00; Quartette, "Come Unto Me;" Gospel Hymns 5 and 6; recitation, "The Sword of Bunker;" Tenor solo, "The Sword of Bunker;" The best voice, $1.00; Impromptu speech, 3 minutes time; Solo, "Ye Hyfryd Wlad;" Canied-ydd 920; ladies over 30, prize $1.00. Names of contestants must reach the secretary by Feb. 19. Love letters must be in the hands of the secretary by Feb. 15. Adjudicators of music, John R. George, Greenwood, Pa.; reciting, etc., Rev. I. Thomas, Taylor, Pa.; committee, Ed. M. Jones, chairman; Eddie F. Jones, secretary; David Pickrell, treasurer; M. P. Lewis, David S. Davies. A mission, adults, 19 cents; children, 5 cents.

JERMYN.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Michael McCarty, of Mayfield yard, took place yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. The remains were followed by a concourse of relatives and friends. The services were held at the St. Rose church, Carbondale and the Rev. Father Griffin officiated. The pallbearers were: Patrick Muldoon, Patrick Tenpenny, Patrick Duffy, Michael Burke, Thomas Flanagan and Michael Muldoon. Interment was made in the St. Rose cemetery, Carbondale.

J. D. Stocker, who has been in Mount Clemens, Michigan, for the past month for the benefit of his health, returned on Wednesday. Invitations have been received here by a number of the friends of Miss Edith Rimson, of Clifford, to attend her marriage to Mr. W. L. Decker, of Dundaff, at the bride's home on next Tuesday.

John D. Pritchard desires to tender his sincere thanks to the voters and his friends in the First ward for their loyal support in the last election. And also says that it has been demonstrated once more that the people of the First ward in preference to Populists and kickers, and that they have no use for ward bosses, political tricksters and illegal voters. Long live the honest people!

PECKVILLE.

Annual report of the secretary of the Blakely Board of Health from Jan. 1, 1897, to Jan. 1, 1898: Pertussis reports were granted for the deaths in their borough as follows: Maras, 1; apoplexy, 4; diphtheria, 5; old age, 1; Bright's disease, 4; measles, 1; heart failure, 7; meningitis, 1; bronchitis, 2; consumption, 1; unknown, 2; general debility, 1; convulsions, 1; gastro fever, 1; erysipelas, 1; scarlet fever, 1; pneumonia, 3; inflammation, 1; tuberculosis, 1; cholera infantum, 6; hepatitis, 1; pleura pulmonalis, 1; accidents, 2; cancer stomach, 1; still born, 3; gastro enteritis, 1; total, 47; twenty-five less than the year 1896. Outside the borough, 235; four more than the year 1896. Nuisances reported, 59; removed, 59; number of contagious diseases reported: diphtheria, 27; scarlet fever, 5; typhoid fever, 72; total, 104; twenty-five less than the year 1896. Number of births reported, 33; six less than year 1896. The most prevalent disease in the borough during the year was measles. The greatest precautions were used during the past year for the better sanitary condition of the borough, as can be seen by the decrease of diseases and deaths compared with the years 1896 and 1896. The board consists of the following: President H. L. Thompson, J. W. Beck, M. D., Sylvanus Smith, C. M. Hathaway, E. L. Craig, Frederick L. Van Siclie, M. D., health officer; sanitary officer and secretary, S. M. Rogers.

Mrs. Edward H. Barber, of South Main street is quite sick with pneumonia. There will be special music at the Presbyterian church on next Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Parkhurst, of Elkland, Pa. They are noted singers.

The Sturge's kindergarten will observe Washington's birthday with patriotic songs, recitations, marching and other amusements. The programme begins at 2 p. m. All are welcome. The Young People's society of the Presbyterian church will give an entertainment in Freeman's hall on the evening of Feb. 22, in commemoration of Washington's birthday. The forty participants will be attired in continental costumes. Music and recitations will be one of the pleasant features of the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Parkhurst will sing. They are specialists in music. Admission to the hall 10 cents, supper, 15 cents. A royal time is anticipated.

"BAILEY'S MISTAKE." A Town in Maine with a Name That Ought to Be Changed. From the Troy Times. The Postoffice department has on numerous occasions insisted on changing the names of offices, even when the natives had no objection to the change and protested against them. In Washington people are so fond of choosing appropriate names they should devote their attention exclusively to those towns whose inhabitants desire relief. Such places are surely to be found. There is one, for example, in the far eastern corner of Maine. It now rejoices in the name of Bailey's Mistake.

A century ago it was called "Skunk's Misery." Later the terms "Puduch," "Hardicrabble," "Mink Hole" and "Suckerville" were applied in turn and then dropped because they didn't begin to convey the prevailing idea. There was a new name every year for a quarter of a century or so, and the nominee was ready for more when Bailey came along and shot off further debate. Bailey's Mistake was named for Sam Bailey, a coasting trader who used to sail into Lubec harbor as often as once a month, the "mistake" part being added at the time of Bailey's last voyage, so that future navigators and geographers would know whose mistake it was. There are two waterways that lead up to Lubec from the Atlantic ocean, one a wide and navigable ship channel, and the other a wide and rocky shoal that affords excellent pasturage for founders and other fish of small draft. About ten years ago Sam Bailey was beating his sloop up to Lubec and had become so familiar with the course that he paid no heed, presuming that his sloop could find her way without help. There is where the "mistake" came in, for trusting too much to the intelligence of his sloop the rocky shoals sprang upon him and he was chewed into toothpicks before morning.

As nobody ever saw anything of Bailey or his crew, it is inferred that the fishes took what was left of him after the waves had done their work. From that date the term "Bailey's Mistake" was attached to this reach of water and the land on both sides of it, and now the coast survey charts have recognized the claims, so that Bailey's Mistake has become a geographical fixture.

LETTERS THAT KILLED. Notable Instances in Political History of Mistakes by Ready Writers. From the Globe-Democrat. "Killed by a Letter" is the significant heading of a Havana newspaper over an article telling of ex-Minister de Lome's fall. This legend would be an appropriate epitaph over the political graves of many public men. The rivalry between Hamilton, the leader of the Federal party, and Adams, the leader de jure, incited Hamilton's letter during the campaign of 1800, arraiging Adams, which was one of the causes of the rupture and the triumph of Jefferson and the Democracy. Hamilton's letters attacking Burr were the cause of the duel in which Hamilton lost his life. Jefferson's letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and lack of delicacy in the use of his name, and his letter to his old neighbor, Mazzei, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he attacked Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the original epistle was penned. The preservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or diary, which is really a sort of letter to poster