

SATERRELLO HAS HIS OWN TROUBLES

His Wife and a Boarder Threw Him Through a Window.

THAT OCCURRED IN BOSTON

When He Got Out of the Hospital He Learned That They Came to This City and Followed Them Here.

Found Them in a House on Ninth Street and for a Time the Three Resided Together.

A few years ago, in the city of Boston, Mass., Thomas Saterello, an aged Italian, lived happily with his wife and a child nine years of age. Their home life was happy until Vincenzo Marutino, another Italian, came into the family as a boarder. One day Saterello returned home and made a discovery that aroused his jealousy and anger, and when he made objection, the man and woman raised a window and threw Saterello out into the street. He was injured, and a police call brought an ambulance and the man was taken to a hospital, where it was learned that his leg and an arm were broken.

Previous to this, he was industrious and saved $200 by selling oranges in winter and ice cream in summer time. While he lay in the hospital, Marutino and the woman took his money, broke up his home, put the child in an institution and came to this city, leaving at Minetta's block on Ninth street. When the old man sufficiently recovered, he learned of their whereabouts, and with the assistance of the police, secured passage to this city and found the wife at the above place. At first they refused to admit his identity, but he did so, with the threat that if he deceived them he would be roughly dealt with.

THEY LIVED TOGETHER. For a time they all lived together, but for this kind of an existence became unbearable for Saterello and he went before Alderman Kelly and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Marutino and woman on a charge of adultery. The warrant was placed in the hands of Frank Egle, the Italian detective, who went to the house to arrest them, taking Constable J. J. Clark and Special Officer Eilmann with him. When they entered the house at 11 o'clock at night, Marutino struck Egle on the arm with a heavy iron bar, and made an attempt to stab him with a butcher knife, which was lying on a table, but he was prevented by Clark. Both were finally arraigned before Alderman Kelly and were committed to the county jail in default of $1,000 bail each.

The old man has no friends here, but Marutino has many friends, who made desperate efforts to secure his release. He declared that he will murder the old man when he is released. When Saterello returned to the house, a brother of Marutino's made threats against the old man's life, and when he learned that he was liable to arrest, he fled and is believed to be in Forest City.

Fearing that further trouble would follow from the friends of Marutino, Saterello again went before the alderman and gave information that will hold Marutino on a charge of stealing goods from the tailor shop of W. Jancko, on Wyoming avenue, the night of the 22d. M. C. A.

HAD CLOTHING WITH HIM. Saterello stated that when Marutino returned home that night he wore a couple of suits of clothes and brought home several pieces of cloth and trimmings for clothing. A search warrant was issued and placed in Detective Egle's hands. He went to the house and found some pieces of cloth, and learned also that other goods had been placed in the hands of a local tailor, together with the trimmings.

These Jancko was notified and identified the goods now in the possession of Alderman Kelly.

Since Saterello has been turned out of his lodgings he has been cared for by considerate friends who took an interest in him. He is still suffering from the effects of his injuries and is aged and feeble, being about 60 years of age, while his wife is about 20. Marutino is 25 years old. The accused are now in the county jail, and despite efforts made to secure their release, are likely to remain there until tried. Friends have offered sums of money to Alderman Kelly to release them.

A NOVEL CAMERA CARRIER.

Mr. Sotilly's Clever Contrivance for Taking Photographs Anywhere. E. W. Sotilly, window dresser for Jonas Long's Sons, is an expert amateur photographer as well as wheelman, has hit upon a clever scheme to combine these pleasant pastimes, for which he has filed an application for a patent. Just behind and under the saddle he has fastened a felt covered board the size of his camera. The board is rigidly fastened by means of clamps to the rear fork and is so angled down to the rear wheel as to remain as any part of the bicycle. By means of the regular tripod screw operated from beneath, the camera is rigidly fastened to the board, which allows the camera to be swung to the right or left without changing the position of the wheel, quite an advantage when taking a number of pictures from the same point.

Another clever idea is that the braces that run to the frame are double, one set of which are composed of being extended and run to the ground, forming a perfect stand for wheel and camera. This is exceptionally valuable in taking time exposures. The carrier is easily fastened to the wheel and when removed can be taken in a few seconds, each part being automatically adjusted. Another advantage is that it needs not only be confined to the use of the camera, but to carry lunch boxes, satchels and bundles. The vehicle runs on the rear wheel is not noticed by the rider. The carrier is nickel plated, neatly constructed and an ornament to the wheel. A great number of riders of bicycles are amateur photographers and when on the road are desirous of taking "snap-shots" at some striking scenery or other object of interest which may present itself. The great drawback to this is the inconvenience of carrying a camera and setting it up properly when the occasion is presented. To meet this inconvenience and provide a simple and cheap arrangement for carrying and supporting the camera and setting it up at any point on the road the new invention should prove to be a winner. A further advantage will be found in that a larger camera can be carried than could be comfortably carried without the attachment, and thus a better and more satisfactory picture may be taken, and the camera being supported in a substantial position and manner, the device becomes of particular advantage in that time exposures may be taken. Mr. Sotilly has used his camera carrier on the roughest roads and it has always been satisfactory. The board being covered with felt on top and the plates separated by the felt pads, so that none are broken. His camera is large and weighs several pounds. Arrangements are being made to have them placed on the market.

AMUSEMENTS

The Sage's Last Night. For two hours last night the Sages kept an audience at the Lyceum convulsed with laughter over the antics of the subjects who had been placed under the hypnotic influence. Some of Thursday night's subjects acted as volunteers and several new subjects were obtained who were easily handled. This afternoon and evening the Sages will repeat their wonderful entertainment at the Lyceum.

Engagement Closes Today.

The Walte Opera company will close its engagement at the Academy of Music today by singing "Bohemia" tonight. Yesterday afternoon "Bohemia" was heard and last night "The Bohemian Girl."

At the Lyceum.

Manager Brock is to give every matinee for the children today. Every child visiting will be given a show and a bag of candy for 5 cents. "Hidde Hand" will be the bill and much fun will be given from it by the little ones. "East Lynne" has proven a strong magnet the last two days. The work of Miss Kemp and the entire company is beyond criticism. It will have its last regular tonight.

Little Lord Fauntleroy.

One of the novelties of the present theatrical season has been the revival of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous story of domestic life, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," with some of the original cast, effects and properties, and will be presented at the Academy of Music for three nights and two matinees, commencing March 7. No more beautiful story has ever been told in dramatic form than the story of "Fauntleroy" of a mother's devotion, and no more beautiful moral than the naughty Earl Dorincourt's complete submission to the will of a mere child.

Robert Mantell.

Robert Mantell will be at the Lyceum Monday, March 10. This excellent actor's greatest work has been in romantic plays and he is ever to be looked out for new manuscripts. "A Secret Warrant," by W. A. Tompkins, is a French story of the Eighteenth century, the scenes being laid at the court of the Duc d'Orleans. Mantell has one of his favorite parts, a soldier of the Duc's guard named Lyle—young, handsome, courageous and of course a perfect swordsman—Louis de Beaumont, captain of King's guards. The grand ladies of the butterfly court think he is splendid and none favor him more vigorously than Gabrielle, the regent's mistress, but the soldier does not reciprocate and the powerful beauty makes up her mind to furnish him with cartridges in the battle. Twice she secures the necessary "letter de cachet" but is outwitted by the dashing guardsman. The play is not heavy at all, though strictly historical, leans toward light comedy.

The Idol's Eye.

Frank Daniels will be here Tuesday night at the Lyceum, March 8, with his new opera, "The Idol's Eye," the latest comic opera success by Harry B. Smith and Victor Herbert. "The Idol's Eye" has made a direct hit in every city in which it has played thus far this season. Frank Daniels has a part which is said to fit him to a "T." He finds in it such material to turn out into a comedy of laugh provoking business. Moreover he is credited with having fully nine popular songs which have become very pleasing to the public and in harmony with the royalties which Victor Herbert is receiving from their sale.

THE HEARING ON THE NEW FEDERAL DISTRICT BILL.

Editor of the Tribune. Sir: On Wednesday last, as briefly mentioned in Thursday's Tribune, Chairman Henderson, of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, granted a hearing on the bill recently introduced by Congressman Campbell to create a new federal judicial district of Pennsylvania, to be called the middle district, embracing within its scope twenty-eight counties in the central part of the State. A delegation of the local fraternity of Judges, consisting of Judge Archibald, ex-Judge Knapp, Collector Penman, Fred W. Fleitz, Geo. M. Watson and James H. Torrey were on hand at an early hour to argue upon the merits of the bill.

By mutual arrangement Judge Archibald led the advance. After a preliminary report to each member of the special committee, as required by the chairman, he began his argument on the necessity for the establishment of a new district, pointing out with great clearness and force how the government suffered financial loss through the extra expense incurred in the way of mileage for jurors, witnesses, sailors, marshals, deputy marshals, transportation of prisoners, and, under the present system, as well as the inconvenience which the people within the radius of a hundred miles of Scranton having legal business with the federal courts, are obliged to endure by reason of the great distances they have to travel to reach Pittsburg, where the federal court is at present located, all of which could be obviated by the establishment of a new judicial district with headquarters at Scranton and sessions of the court at both Williamsport and Harrisburg.

George M. Watson, esq., followed Judge Archibald in a comprehensive statement in detail, amplifying many of the points brought out by the judge. Mr. Watson exhibited a large post-route map of Pennsylvania, illustrating thereby by means of heavy red and blue lines outlining the contemplated new district, and pointing with the designation of each place where court is now held in every county embraced within the new district, and its distance from both Pittsburg and Scranton, which was considered by all as a strong point in favor of the bill. He also showed that the savings that would accrue from the fees received, would more than compensate the government for the equipment of the new court, another strong point.

James H. Torrey, esq., followed Mr. Watson in a compact summary of the case, dwelling particularly on the great growth of population in recent years throughout the anthracite coal district, the hardships imposed on the people of this section by the administration of justice for every little detail connected with litigation before the federal court, the probable increase of business through the operation of the new bankruptcy law in favor of the pending act become a law; the trifling expense on the part of the government, and the great benefit in operation, and many other strong points along these lines. His argument was especially cogent.

Congressman Olmstead, of Harrisburg, closed, by courtesy of the committee, (it being the hour of twelve, noon, when the committee, under the rules, usually rises), and made a strong argument in favor of the bill from a personal and congressional standpoint, in which he claimed that the new district had a Federal court building in Scranton, Williamsport and Harrisburg each all equipped for court purposes, but without the court. Mr. Olmstead's remarks made a strong impression on the committee as his entire congressional district is within the contemplated new district.

Taking it altogether the city of Scranton should be proud of the delegation of legal gentlemen here sent to the capitol to represent her interests as involved in the creation of the new judicial district. No group of men could have presented the case in better fashion. They said everything it was necessary to say and no more, and being in harmony did not conflict with each other's arguments. Hon. T. V. Powderly, commissioner of immigration, was an attentive listener to the arguments and pronounced them above the average. Everything looks promising for a favorable report on the bill by the special committee having it in charge. —Samuel R. Strattan. Washington, March 4.
