MIRRORS FOR SEARCHLIGHTS.

Important for the Detection of the Elusive Torpedo Boat.

The strength of the Spanish navy in tornedo boats makes it necessary that all United States vessels and forts shall be provided with searchlights, and it s found that it is no easy matter to ourchase a sufficient number of searchlights in an emergency. A large number of the finest searchlight mirrors have been bought, but an adequate supply of them cannot be had. Having mirrors the electric companies could turn out the lights in a brief

The mirror is an essential part of the light, and its manufacture is a deli-cate operation which needs care and time to finish it successfully. It is not an ordinary reflector, which may be cast and molded, but has to be ground accurately and highly polished. It is really a concave lens, backed by silcer and hardened vulcanite. Machines for grinding the reflectors have been made which facilitate the work, but it requires about a week to make a satis-
