Situation with the straint of the st ONE WOMAN'S VIEWS. SUMMUMMUMMUMME.

This war business is no joke. Just why so many people have all along considered it in the light of a trivial affair is difficult to determine. To be sure it is almost inconceivable to an American under thirty-nve years of age that in this advanced day of civilization war can take place, especially with the most advanced nation in the universe as one of the combatents. Many of our people have felt that war couldn't happen, and that if nothing else intervened, some miracle of Divine Providence would arrest proceedings. There are those who have kept silent during these weeks of suspense, who have remembered the past with a thrill which held an anomaly of emotions in which patriotism and honor were mingled tertained at cards Tuesday evening in with a hint of the old inspired belief sion. They have remembered the days when war was no joke; when from every fireside came the sound of mourning or alarm for the first born honor of their guest, Miss Taibot, son, or for the father or husband on a Among those present were: Mrs. E. B. distant battlefield. To many who thus Jermyn, Miss Archbald, Miss Belin, recall the wild excitement, the dread Miss Allis Dale, Miss Simpson, the and the nights filled with desperate Misses Matthews, Miss Phelps, Miss fear, war means something different Winton, the Misses Reynolds, Miss from what it means to the young Sherer, the Misses Bessell, Miss Cole- guardsman, or to the war orator, who has no idea of personal peril, as his fighting will be done by long distance connection.

There were two women yesterday who paused to read a Tribune bulletin and to whom war was no joke. One of them was old and wrinkled and she wore rusty black which her pension could not avail to renew. She was all alone and there were big tears slipping down the furrows of her cheeks and mingling with the chill April rain drops on her shabby cloak. "He went away one April morning," she was saying in an undertone. "He had tears in his beautiful eyes, but behind then was the smile of youth and hope, and he cried brightly. It won't take more than a month at the outside to whip em, and I'll be home before the baby has a chance to forget me." But there were three years, and then thirty years and he has not come home, and the baby forgot the proud young soldierfather, and now he, too, will go out in his enthusiasm into this war, and it ill be to me like the day his father left me with my baby on my arm."

The other face that grew whiter as ominous messages flashed before ber eyes, belonged to a fair young girl,

She was silken clad, and had just stepped down from a carriage at the son and Mrs. H. P. Bishop Fowler, who has gained naional reputation as an orator, will probably give one of his famous lectures in this city in the near future. His "Abraham Lincoln" is generally conceded to be the greatest specimen of purely American oratory now on the lecture platform, although he considers the theme of Grant, as handled by himself, to surpass the former. There were prominent clergymen present at conference last week who had heard this lecture four times but who listened breathlessly to its fifth repetition. John R. Procter, formerly state geologist of Kentucky, writes of "The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky" for the March Century, Mr. Procter says: The entrance to Mammoth cave is pathway leading from the hotel dox a the hillside over jutting moss and ferncovered limestone cliffs into a icautiful sien extending from the top of the hill down to Green River, which is 194 feet below the mouth of the cave, and about half a mile distant. If the weather is warm, as we near the entrance we step into a bracing, cool, pure air, welling up from the cave and flowing down the gien beneath the of 99 degrees, while the other hand was extended into a cool flowing river of air with the temperature at about 60 degrees. The air within the cave has a uniform temperature, summer and winter, of 54 degrees. The cave may be said to breathe twice a year-inhaling during the winter, and exhaling during the summer. This breathing of the cave, and the purity of the air among the most interesting problems | routes, to be studied. By what process the air in the cave becomes sterifized re-

But our faithful negro guide has counted the party, selected the requisite number of lamps, and given the word, and we follow him in single file down the rude stone steps into the vestibule of the cave. which our guide proclaims the Rotun-We note the peculiar musical effect of the human voice. Years ago it was my good fortune to hear a celebrated German musical society sing in this Rotunda. I went far away in one of the great avenues leading from here. blew out my light, and sat alone in the darkness and listened white the grand anthems rolled and reverberaters. That's better, I take it, then rolleds through the lofty corridors in majestic waves of melody. I could then appreciate the inestimable privilege of the few who heard Jenny Lind sing here. few who heard Jonny Lind sing here. air upon the members of our party. It is believed that the air has become oxygenated by chemical process; cer-Exhiberating Effect of the Cool and tainly from its purity and dryness, it enables one to undergo exercise for hours without a sense of fatigue. Here before us is evidence of the wonderful dryners of the air. The saltpeter vats erected in 1812, and the timbers which have remained in their present position since then, show no evidences of decay. In these vats the saltnerewas leached from the nitrous earth abounding in the upper and middle dry avenues, and used for the manufacture of gunpowder. The war of 1812 was fought, on the American side. with gunpowder made from saltpeter taken from caves, and Mammoth cave supplied the greater part. One wonders how, in the absence of germs and of decay, the earth becomes charged with nitrogen. It has been claimed that litric acid in the atmosphere, combining with the limestone, forms nitrate of calcium, and the disintegrated waste from the walls and ceiling yields the great supply of nitrogen
