WELL TRAINED IN THE CIVIL WAR

Entered as a Private at the Age of Seventeen and Rose to the Rank of Major by Sheer Force of Merit. Noteworthy Incidents of His Surrice on the Battlefield -- Understands the Horrors and Dangers of War, but Has the Ability Which Makes for Successful Generalship.

Washington, April, 25,-Of the ten soldier presidents of the United States whose services in that office covered practically forty years of the existence of the Republic, William Mc-Kinley is the first to call the nation to arms. Nine men who had seen active military service have preceded him as chief executive of the nation, several of them serving two terms, yet it was reserved for this man, who entered the service of the nation as a private soldier at the age of seventeen and rose step by step as a result of active and gallant service upon the field of buttle, thus realizing the full meaning of the step, to issue the first soldier's call to war. Washington, Jackson, Harrison, Taylor, Pierce, Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Harrison, former occupants of the White House, were all military men; all generals, yet not one of them was called upon to assume the responsibility and duties which now devolve upon William Me-Kinley, private soldier, sergeant, lieutenant, and at the close of the ser-

MILITARY EXPERIENCE.

Every war which has heretofore been entered upon since the organization of the government was begun under the administration of a man without military experience, whether it be the war with the Barbary states in 1803 and again in 1815; the war of 1812; the war with Mexico or the War of the Rebellion.

Possibly President McKinley's practical knowledge of war and of the losses of life and all the sorrows which accompany it, may have had something to do with his willingness, anxlety indeed, to bring the questions which have been constantly before him since his inauguration to a peaceful solution. If this be true, it was because of this practical knowledge of the horrors of war and the sufferings they must bring, for there is nothing in William McKinley's personal record in the field to show lack of courage or hesitation before entering upon the struggles which must result in a loss of life, and endanger all those participating.

M'KINLEY'S WAR RECORD. It is interesting at this time and under these circumstances to recall something of the actual war history and services of this soldier-president, who now becomes the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy at the time when the nation is entering upon actual hostilities. It was in June, 1861, at Poland, Ohio, his boyhood nome, that, a seventeen year old boy, he volunteered and entered the nation's service as a private soldier. The record of his early military service is has this traffic become that the authtold by that earlier Ohio president, oritles have at last decided to take the Dickson Manufacturing Co 100 General Rutherford B. Hayes, who said of William McKinley:

When I first made his acquaintance boy just past the age of 17. He, with me, entered upon a new, strange life, the life of a soldier in the time of actual war. It was soon found that he had unusual character was we soon found him in executive ability, a man of unusual and unsur-passed capacity. When battles were to be fought or service performed in place. The night was never too dark, the weather never too cold for prompt and efficient performance of his duty. When I became commander of the regiment, he soon came to be upon my staff and I learned to know him like a book and love him like a brother. He naturally progressed, for his talent and capacity could not be unknown. on which more men were killed and wounded than any other day of the war was the 17th of September, 1832. in the battle of Antietam. That battle began at daylight. Without bronkfast, without coffee, the men went into the fight and continued puttl after the sun went down. Early in the afternoon they were famished and thirsty. The commissary department of the brig-ade was under Sergeant McKinley's administration. From his hands every hot coffee and warm meats, a thing that had never occurred under simi-tar circumstances in any other army in the world. He passed under fire and delivered with his own hands those things so essential for the men for whom he was laboring.

ALERT AND INTREPID

When in later years, Major McKinleys qualities as a manager of important undertakings were called into question by somebody, the reply was made by one familiar with his record 'A man who, before he had attained the age of twenty-one, kept up the supplies of the army of General Crook in active service in the field, is not lacking in business ability." That his action in emergency and under great stress of circumstances is prompt and wise is shown by an incident occurring during Sheridan's great battle at Opequan, when Captain McKinley as de camp on the staff of General Sheridan, brought a verbal message to General Duval, commanding the Second division, to move his command autickly to a position on the right of the Sixth corps, the First division having previously been ordered to that position. General Duval, on receiving the order, asked, "By what route shall move my command?" Captain Mc-Kinley, knowing no more about the country than did General Duval, and without definite orders, replied, would move up this creek," to which Duval replied, "I will not budge with-

Captain McKinley replied, "This s time of great emergency, General, l order you by command of General Crook to move your command up this savine to a position on the right of the army." General Duval obeyed and moved on the route indicated by the young aide de camp, attained the position, charged the enemy and drove them in confusion from their works, as the result of the responsibility taken by Captain McKinley at this critical moment.

it was posted at the beginning of the battle. General Hayes, turning to Lieutenant McKinley, directed him to go and bring away the regiment if it had not already fallen back. McKinley turned his horse and keenly New York, April 25,-The market for securities was sluggish and almost stag-nant today. Prices ruled below Satur-day's close all day and while there was a brief pause at one time, on the down-ward course, due to strength shown by one or two of the industrial specialties, the sagging tendency of the warks. emy. A sad look came over General Hayes' face as he saw this young gal-lant boy push rapidly forward to al-most certain death. None of us ex-pected to see him again as he pushed his horse through the open fields, over fences, over ditches, while a well directed fire from the enemy was poured upon him, with shells explodthe sagging tendency of the market was practically uninterrupted. The trading was narrow and professional and the declines really represented nothing more than a natural reaction from Saturday's idvance.
