The current number of the Railway Employes Journal had an excellent half tone portrait of G. W. Evans, clerk of Poor, shrunken the common council. Accompanying dyspeptics bethe picture is the following sketch of Mr. Evans

He has lived in Carbondale for nearly. twenty years, where he is held in high few regard by a wide and ever-broadening circle of friends. He has been connected with the Delaware and Hudson company since he took up his residence in the Anthracite City, being initiated into sluggish the business of the system at the "bottom notch," and gradually, through his natural ability to handle commercial affairs and his genial manner of invoking the finer feelings of his fellows, has moved step by step along the avenues of success, until now he occupies the position at the head of the finance of the company's Pennsylvania division freight department in Carbondale. Mr. Evans is always a first leader in movements that will tend to augment the welfare of others, and that he is a gen+ eral favorite with the employes of the different grades of the transportation department is needless to append. 'On several occasions he has been designated by popular vote to represent his city's interests at important political assemblages, and for the past two terms has acted in the capacity of clerk of the common council to which position he was again re-appointed for an additional term on the 4th inst., the incoming hoard being so pleased with the result of its review of his past work. It deemed it good precedent to retain his services for the present term.

SUSQUEHANNA'S VILLAGE IM-PROVEMENT SOCIETY - SINGULAR ROCK NEAR HALE'S EDDY-EF. FORTS OF COUNTY CITIZENS AT RECRUITING FOR THE ARMY - A SNAKE THAT LOVES LAMBS. NOTES OF INTEREST TO RAIL-ROADERS.

Special to the Scranton Tribune

Susquehanna, May 3 .- Uncle Billy Carter, an aged colored man, had an exciting experience near Starrucca, a few mornings since. Billy is a man-ofall-work, who recently resided in Port Jervis. He was given rent free of an old house near the village, on condition that he would repair it and occupy it to that the owner could get it insured. Billy, his wife and children duly arrived with their household effects and repared to "keep house." In the cabin is an old-fashioned fire-place. Billy went to the forest nearby and carried home a quantity of pine cones and knots. Putting them into the fire-place he soon had a blazing, roaring, crackling fire. While Billy was unpacking box his attention was directed by a hissing sound from the fire-place, and, ooking up, he saw a snake drop down the chimney and into the flames in the fire-place. In a moment two more serpents, locked in death's embrace, fell into the blaze. Billy grasped an axe handle, and surmising that he would have use for it, stood ready for action. As the old cabin warmed up, snakes of various hues and sizes, gareter snakes, black snakes, and milk snakes slowly came out of crevices and down from the rafters, hissing and squirming. Some of them showed light, but Billy soon placed them all hors de combat. They continued for half an hour to drop into the flames, the frying flesh filling the cabin with smoke. Oceasionally two snakes, after landing upon the floor, would engage in a flerce fight, while Billy was watching the death scenes in the fireplace. In an hour the last snake appeared, and the old man gathered up the dead. There were forty-six, by actual count, and more than that number met death in the flames. Billy placed the snakes end to end and they measured 115 feet. He thinks he has earned his first month's
