WAR IS WAR.

There's No Conducting It According to Soft Soap Principles.

From the Chicago Inter-Oceans. There is no truer maxim of war than that procrastination is cruelty. War is not an exchange of amenities. The only way to secure peace is to light for it and compet surrender. Half-way measures serve to protong the agony and increase the mortality. McClellan's slowness, which finally exhausted the patience of even Abraham Lincoln, is now generally attributed to that dread of carnage which ultimately cost he country terri-

ness the departure, which was very pa-thetic indeed. * * * The regiments left ble less of life. Europe has had three great wars since Waterloo, The first, waged about Sebas-topol, dragged on, as if the allies could not bring themselves to inflict a decisive The only thing wrong with the blow on Bussia. France was compelled by the stern and pititous computation of war to surrender. Time is the greatest of all factors in determining the extent of military dis-aster. The less of life, as well as the Mr. Logan has been employed by the and of war, is great in proportion as the onflict is long. It was the horrible ength of the thirty years' war which made it so desolating. The swift yeageance of an Alexander subdued nations without spreading desolution. In our present war a Grant and not i McCleilan should be the inspiration of the campaign. Nor should the energies of army or navy be held in restraint by horror of war. The battle-fings have been thrown to the breeze, and the greater the vigor of our attack, by land or sea, the scoper will it all be over and the fewer the lives sacrificed.
