ALMOST A FATAL CURVE.

A Baseballist from Priceburg Navrowly Escapes Death at Simpson.

A young man named Faul from Priceburg is lying at the Coughlin house in Simpson in a precarious condition as the result of an accident during a gamof base ball. The Priceburg team care to Carbondale to meet the Anthraeites the game taking place at Anthracite park. The game was comparatively unevently for several innings, until the accident occurred which laid out the Priceburg player. Michael Thorney was in the box for the Anthracutes when Paul came to the bat. He stood at the plate waiting for a ball to suit him while several wide ones went by. Tierney wound up for a hard one and let it fly. It was a high fast ball, and just as it neared the plate it took a sudden shoot inward. The batsman had not expected this and made no effort to The ball struck him on the head behind and a little above the ear. Paul went down like a dead man, and instantly blood gushed from his cars, nose and eyes. He was unconscious when picked up and carried into a dressing room.

Great consternation followed the accident as it was feared that the blow was fatal. Tierney, the pitcher, who delivered the ball to the batter, was very much concerned and exhibited much feeling over the unfortunate ne-currence. Although, of course, he was Gannon was elected temporary secrein no way to blame, he felt his position | fury.

In the confusion following the accident no one seemed to have presence of mind enough to send for a doctor. There was none on the grounds, and the members of the teams and the speciators stood about waiting for the outcome of the accident. The victim dist not show any signs of recovering consciousness and finally a messenger came to town for a physician. In the meantime Dr. Balley, who had been on a professional visit to Forest City, earny driving by and was called in. This was fully an hour after the accident, He ordered the victim removed to the Coughlin house nearly and put to bed. I'nder the doctor's treatment the wounded player recovered consciousness, but was still very weak. Two of him home. He endenvored to get up but was stricken with a diggy spell and fell back fainting. The doctor was again called and he ordered that Paul he given absolute rest for several days. He is suffering from concussion, and must be kept quiet to avert serious con-
