TRAINING SCHOOL PUPILS GRADUATE

Eight Young Ladies Receive the Much-Coveted Diplomas.

HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM'S SEAT-ING CAPACITY WAS TAXED BY A LARGE AUDIENCE-DECORATIONS. MUSIC AND OTHER ATTENDANT FEATURES WERE ON A SCALE COMMENSURATE WITH THE IM-PORTANCE OF THE EVENT-AD-DRESS BY DR. MARBLE, OF THE NEW YORK CITY SCHOOLS.

The weather man was good to the class of the Scranton Training school, for last night, instead of being the customary commencement weather, a gale blew across the High School auditorium, whose capacity was taxed to the utmost by the many people present it the graduating exercises

Perhaps no stage in this city ever presented such an attractive appearance as the broad one massed with palms at either end and with green covered seats raised to accommodate to best advantage the thirty-two white robed maidens who flocked in like a fluttering array of doves and made a foil for the black coated officials at the left, and the band half screened at the right by the towering palms. Two American flags fastened in the center with the single star of Cuba, surmounted the large design "98, Excelsior," On the platform were Superintenden Howell, Professor G. W. Phillips, Dr. Marble, Rev. D. J. MacGouldrick, Controllers Francois, Neuis, Walsh and Jennings. In the center seated be-tween the two groups of young women was Miss Mary E Sykes, the efficient superintendent of the Training school. two loaded cars and several men were

Superintendent Howell presided. Miss Edna Klauminzer gave the salu-tatory which was brief, well composed and graceful Miss Annie B. Rose told what we do in the Training school, illustrating the teaching of each season. A clever innovation was introduced at intervals in Miss Rose's pane in the shape of little songe sung most sweetly by the fresh girlish voices. It was a departure from the routine comsencement programme and was much njoyed, aside from the interesting inormation gained from the description f work.

Nothing more charming can be conceived than the illustration of "Do you know how does the farmer?' when since. The company had begun to fill two fair girls sedately passed across beneath it with cuim from the breaker the stage, one holding ribbon reins, which were held about the round form York, Ontaric and Western Railroad of the other in advance. The motion ong which followed told of the year's labor of the farmer.

Miss Edna Kent read the class poem on the subject of the class motto "Ex-The poem was pleasing in rhythm and impassioned in sentiment, and was delivered with earnestness the entire anthracite regions of Pennsyland eloquence. After a pleasing duet by Misses Rose and Perry, Dr. A. P. Marble, associate superintendent of schools in New York, made the address of the evening. Dr. Marble is a handsome man, who read his address and was rather closely confined to his

Dr. Marble addressed the young ladies in terms of praise for their long study and determination, saying the teacher leaves more impress upon the zation and plan of distributing relief to children by what she is than by what children by what she is than by what she does. While the graduates no doubt know much, they must rememser that they lack much in the way of experience and in their youthful enthusiasm will cause the veteran teachers to smile.

The training school for teachers produces better schools and from these better soldiers will be turned out. Educational advantages tells in modern warfare. It was an important feature n the Franco-Prussian war, and is being shown in the Spanish-American war, which will result in a victory for our nation

The speaker said that there are three important elements necessary to the successful teacher-scholarship, ability to instruct, and power to stimulate the self-activity of the child. In conclusion, he remarked that he felt interested in this place, first because it was a training school; then the committee came to where he lived when they were building this structure and asked advice, which they say was of service; then, too, a former pupit of his is influential in the prosperity and progress of this city, referring to Mr. W.
