"Times and Rhymes," by James Clarence Harvey, is a little blue and white volume, clover decked without and with heavy, creamy pages within that will afford the reader more than one delightful perusal. The avowed purpose of the collection is that the poems are suitable for recitations, but there are many verses which contain sentiment and thought in which their beauty is most appreciated by the sitent reader. They are of unequal merit, yet all have something distinctive to commend them. "The Whist-ling Regiment." "The Bicycle Race." and others are such as to appeal to the popular car. There are also two enoyable prose selections. There is one little poem on the grewsome subject of "An Old Skull" that contains some delicious bits of philosophy. Here is

"I say, old skull, you've a happy race thought that the grave was a dismal place. I'll wager a hat that when on earth You hadn't that permanent look of mirth And frowned as you went about sinning."

Another, "The Waxen Bust," is full f quaint humor relating to the trials a photograph man who had to take the queen:

But he couldn't say 'Lift up your chin' to her. He couldn't command her smiles couldn't put prongs in the back of

Of the Queen of the British Isles," Here is a stanza from a poem of much poetic beauty;
"I wonder if ever the angelo eyes
Are filled with pitying tears,
As they grant to the souls unfit for flight,
A few more weary years."

It may not be generally known the extent to which the Young Men's Christian association is occupying the field among the volunteer army of the United States now mobilized at the various state headquarters, and especially at the three large national camps. viz: Chickamauga, Tampa and Camp Alger, Va. At the above named camps extensive outlay in practical appliances most needed and appreclated by the soldiers has been made by the Young Men's Christian association, state and national.

An idea of the work in general may be obtained from a synopsis of the work of these representative fields-Camp Alger.

There are now erected at eight strategic points, suitable tentage for adequately carrying forward the plans made by the association for the elevation of the 22,000 or more volunteers from at least twelve different states. Other tents will be erected as men and means can be secured. Of these 22,000 men at Camp Alger, four regiments come from Pennsylvania. The Associate society of the Red Cross of this state is making strenuous efforts to equip an ambulance corps and field hospital to send it to the front immediately and maintain it. To carry out its plans successfully large expenditure of money will be necessary. The people are responding generously to the appent, but the conthe undertaking tributions are not commensurate with
