SCRANTON, JUNE 22, 1898.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

STATE. Governor—WILLIAM A. STONE. Lieutenant Governor—J. P. S. GOBIN. Secretary of Internal Affairs—JAMES W. LAYFA.

COLONEL STONE'S PLATFORM

It will be my purpose when elected to so conduct myself as to win the respect and good will of those who have opposed me as well as those who have given me their support.

In the re-nomination of Hon. James C. Vaughan, the Republicans of this senatorial district have rewarded conspicuous merit.

That American influence has recently risen in the appreciation of discerning Europeans is shown, among other ways, by the action of the Novoe Vremya.

It cannot be denied that a most painful impression has been produced on the Russian public opinion by the language of a part of the American press.

It is too early to prognosticate what the effect of this enormous supply of wheat will have on the price.

Our visitor will learn when he has had opportunity to study the situation here that no Anglo-American alliance is contemplated by Americans against Russia.

The organization of the first regiment of United States Volunteer Engineers has been completed.

opoly of American friendship; nor can we agree to turn the cold shoulder to England as the price of a continuance of Russian favors.

President McKinley's promotion of Lieutenant Edgar D. Jadin to a majorship in the engineering corps will be generally recognized as well bestowed.

Agricultural Prospects. Local and national agricultural prospects have never been brighter in the history of the country.

Locally we are happy to say that the harvest promises to be one of magnificent returns.

Even the elements smile on the American cause. Hardly a man of Shafter's army was sea-sick.

Pennsylvania Oral School for the Deaf. PASSING up the steep road to Dunmore from North Park, or toward Forest Hill country, the casual observer still realizes, as he glances over the meadows, yet somewhat unkempt foreground of the dark grey stone buildings at the left.

Beyond the stream floats the big flag of the school and the red, white and blue is seen at every turn.

Today the year at the Oral school closes and the 76 pupils go to their several homes for vacation.

The institution receives state aid to the amount of $200,000 per capita or should be so. This year it was cut to $100,000.

It is governed by the twelve local directors, who are elected, and six appointed by the governor. They are:

President—Hon. Alfred Hand, Scranton, Secretary and Treasurer—Henry Bell, Jr., Scranton.

lan boy came in from another room. It is wonderful to see how hard these boys try to speak as their teacher directs, and it is often pathetic as they suddenly clasp their throats or tap their chins as if to assist the sound.

Their lip reading teaches an astonishing degree of perfection, and it should be remembered that few gestures are used. The written work is accurate and beautiful.

Dear Miss Mary Connor: I am well. Belle and Miss B. went to church yesterday morning.

Here is another by a small boy of the same age: I love you very much. We saw the squirrel today. I was a very good boy yesterday morning.

Dear Lydia: Are you well? You are pretty. When you come to my house I shall give you some roses and I think, because you are a very, very pretty girl, I will be happy all the time when you go home.

Here is an extract from a composition on Macbeth, written by Charles L. Clark, son of Mrs. Jacob Clark.

In the eleventh century Edward the Confessor was the king of England and Duncan the Meek was the king of Scotland.

The work of the senior classes is remarkable for its high standard and intelligence and would reflect great credit on pupils possessing every sense intact.

The Pennsylvania Oral school for the Deaf was opened in October, 1882, in the middle building on the grounds now occupied.
