FAMOUS TRIAL OF SENATOR KENNEY

THE STATESMAN IS CHARGED WITH A SERIOUS OFFENSE.

Judge Bradford's Decision on Application for Writ of Habeas Corpus—Defense Resumes its Examination of Witnesses — William Boggs is Called to the Stand and Gives Interesting Testimony.

Wilmington, Del., July 18.—In the United States district court today in the trial of United States Senator Kenney, Judge Bradford announced his decision in the application made by the defence for a writ of habeas corpus to require the appearance of Ezekiel T. Cooper, now in the Trenton, N. J., penitentiary, as a result of the Boggs defalcations, to give testimony. The court in granting the application and making the writ returnable tomorrow at 10 o'clock, said that he was in doubt about the authority of the Circuit court of this district to issue a writ for a prisoner in the Trenton prison, and that he was not certain that Mr. Cooper was competent. In view of a doubt, however, he would give Senator Kenney the advantage of it and would issue the writ.

The defense then resumed its examination of witnesses. Amos Cole, who obtained $500 from Boggs on a letter from Senator Kenney, testified in reference to that transaction, but nothing important developed. William Anderson, the Philadelphia builder, was examined regarding the receipt by him of Senator Kenney's checks as payment for Boggs' business dealings with him. He said he did not know of Kenney in the building transaction and had no idea at the time he executed the contract that the senator's checks would be given.

The defense here rested its case pending the examination of Ezekiel T. Cooper upon his arrival from Trenton tomorrow. By agreement the government began testimony in rebuttal.

BOGGS ON THE STAND.

William N. Boggs was called and testified to discrepancies in the statement of Senator Kenney as to Boggs' resources in 1896. Considerable time was taken up with testimony as to the witness' loss on Bay State gas in their mutual dealings. Senator Kenney had stated it was $1,407. Boggs denied this and said it was $407. He said that the $1,000 had nothing to do with their mutual dealings in Bay State. A struggle followed between counsel as to what the $1,000 did represent, but the court held it improper testimony in rebuttal. Recess until 2.45 o'clock.

After recess Judge Bradford stated that on further reflection he had come to the conclusion that the admission of testimony as to what the $1,000 represented was proper and he, therefore, withdrew his adverse ruling and allowed Boggs to state his answer to district attorney's question. The witness said the $1,000 was a deposit he had made to Senator Kenney's account and was a result of it being necessary to show funds for the senator's checks which he had been withholding. A draft which had been deposited to the senator's account, he said, had come back protested and it became necessary to use $1,000 to balance the accounts properly. The $1,000, he said, was afterward repaid.

Referring to the testimony of Senator Kenney concerning Bay State gas speculation Boggs denied that he suggested to Mr. Kenney the advantages he might derive from purchasing that stock. In another portion of the defendant's examination in chief the statement was made that during the greater part of July and August, 1896, Mr. Kenney was absent from Dover. District Attorney Vandergrift asked Boggs if this was true. Boggs replied that the senator was in Dover on an average of five days out of six and in that time made a number of deposits at the bank. A number of deposit slips were introduced by the government tending to lend strength to Boggs' rebuttal testimony on this point. Counsel for the defendant admitted the slips were made out by Senator Kenney buta stated that they might have been mailed.

Bogga contradicted Mr. Kenney's testimony in a number of minor particulars and there were frequent passages between counsel relative to the asking of certain questions.

SHERIFF DOWNES' TESTIMONY.

Deputy Sheriff Downes was called in rebuttal by the government and was asked concerning the $1,650 check given by Senator Kenney in Boggs' farm transaction. Senator Kenney had said that he had no recollection of giving the check, but presumed that he did and that he gave simply to secure the purchase until final settlement by Boggs. Mr. Downes said that the check was not given to secure the purchase, but as he understood it, Senator Kenney's check was the final payment.

J. H. Bateman, formerly cashier of the bank, was called and asked if any order had ever been issued by him in reference to overdrafts by Senator Kenney. A long and earnest argument followed between counsel over the propriety of the question. Judge Bradford admitted it. Mr. Bateman stated that he had issued special orders to Boggs not to allow overdrafts in the accounts of Mr. Kenney and others. When pressed for his reasons for issuing the order the witness said that Mr. Kenney seemed to show a disposition to use the funds of the bank somewhat too freely. An effort was made by the district attorney to have him name the others he had in mind when he gave Boggs such an order, but this was overruled.

Court then adjourned until tomorrow, when Ezekiel T. Cooper,who will meanwhile have been brought from Trenton penitentiary, will be examined briefly. The commonwealth will then call a few more witnesses in rebuttal, after which the argument will begin.

BASE BALL NOTES.

John Keenan recently released by Wilkes-Barre, on Saturday accepted the terms with Howard J. Earl, who is managing the Utica team in the New York league, and has joined the team. He will receive a splendid salary without reservation at the end of the season.

It wouldn't be a bad idea for Ned Hanlon, manger of the Baltimores, to give a man once in a while, whom he releases, a good word. He never has anything decent to say about anyone but himself. He wants all the praise, and if it were not for the sporting editors of the country booming Hanlon no one would know that such a man existed. He has thrown a snot at Billy Hoffer, who formerly twirled for Buffalo, calling him a record player, etc. Hoffer won the pennant for him two years ago and put up some of the most remarkable batting ad fielding or any pitcher who ever twirled a ball. Hanlon cannot see anything in the past, however, and his roast on the ex-Bison is as follows: "Record players are not sought for by managers of teams." According to a Baltimore player Hoffer, the pitcher, is such an individual, and that Hanlon released him on this account. "Hoffer led the pitchers for two seasons," said the player in question to the Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune's representative, "and he tried to keep up that record. That caused his downfall. In order to save his record he would hit batsmen and send them to first on balls. The result was that he lost many of his games, but he did not seem to mind that so long as he could show a good record. There is nothing wrong with his pitching arm, and if he will only get that record idea out of his head he will pitch winning ball, and no mistake about it."—Buffalo Enquirer.

"The tricks that were turned on the diamond by Mike Kelly, Yank Robinson and that class of tricksters a dozen years ago would never pass muster in these days, and when you turn back a page in base ball history and recall the dodges worked by Kel, Robbie and Comiskey, you wonder how they ever managed to get away with their sub-rosa schemes," says Earl Wagner. "At Sportsman's park in St. Louis during the season of '86, Long John Reilly, then the first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, drove a boundless ball past Robinson and into the right field bleachers. The ball was lost to the sight of the spectators in the stand and to John Kelly, who was umpiring. Hughey Nichols sprinted to deep right field on a bluff chase of the sphere. The crowd, as well as John Kelly, thought the ball was on the field, instead of which it was in the right field bleachers. The ball was watching Reilly tear around the sacks. Robbie ran along near the bleachers and yelled: 'Throw out that ball on the quiet; be quick, before the umpire gets next.' One slick bleacher immediately took Robbie's cue and tossed the ball at Robbie's feet. Then Nichols turned and made a bluff throw, and Robbie shot the ball to Doc Bushong in time to nail Reilly at the home rubber. Such a bare faced trick seems impossible, but it actually happened, as I can prove by Charley Comiskey. It seems to me that the patrons of the game, the players and the umpires watch the game closer than they did in the days when Kel, Robbie and Comiskey were in their flower."

Swift will twirl for his team, and Duffy for the Sunsets. Each club is confident of victory.

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

New York, July 18.—The downward movement in stocks today was checked before the close and the level of prices brought back slightly above Saturday's close. But it cannot be said that the market was sustained by any buying demand, for its bulgrgy was influenced completely. A break of 4½ per cents. in Metropolitan Street railway due to the pending suspension of traffic on some of its lines during a reconstruction period, was the main unsettling factor in the morning. Quite a heavy decrease in earnings of the New York Central for June and the shrinkage in the east bound rail freight movement, due to the lively competition of the lake lines, were also factors of weakness. New York Central's decline was, however, only fractional and it recovered 1¼c. in the late dealings. Buying of Brooklyn Rapid Transit on the continued increase in earnings was also a sustaining factor and the recent pressure against the coalers ceased, those stocks generally showing gains. The total sales were 151,700 shares.
